threatens to shatter the labormanagement harmony which has prevailed in the automobile industry for the past five years.

Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, and most other union 1-aders see eye-to-eye with management on the ultimate significance of automation. They agree it could raise American living standards to unheard-of

But they don't agree on how automation-the use of automatic equipment to perform many tasks now performed by numan laborshould be introduced.

Reuther says the union is not "afraid" of automation itself, but fears the industry may rush into the automation age without regard to the individual worker. The UAW already has served notice that long-term contracts are out. Annual Wage Demand

"Under contracts of short dura tion," the UAW said in a policy statement, "the union will be able to keep abreast of the various developments." Automation is a key factor behind the UAW's drive for a tract negotiations this spring. Severance pay provisions under a guaranteed wage agreement would discourage companies from laying off large numbers of employes to make way for automa tion in plants, the union believes. Instead, automation would be introduced during times of expanding markets when displaced workers could find other jobs more

The UAW also feels manufacturers would be more inclined to train old employes to perform
