Iva Kitchell To Appear Tonight

Iva Kitchell, world-famous dance satirist, will appear at North Salem High School this evening at 8:15 p.m. under the auspices of the Willamette University Distinguished Artist Series.

The sparkling dance comedienne is noted for her vivid mimicry and impersonation. She can toss off one character and appear in another as easily as most dancers change a scarf. Her style and personality undergo lightning changes with each number. Although she puts on a one-woman show, the audience sees a dozen different personalities on the stage before the show is over.

A few excerpts from Miss Kitchell's program give an insight into the spirit of the remarkable dancer as she writes:

"Dear audience: Hello! You know I always have the most dreadful time selecting my programs ahead of time. You see, I make up my dances as the spirit moves me, and somehow I seem to want to perform them the same way—one night this dance, one night that dance . . . It drives the management crazy . . . I still don't know what the program will be, but please don't worry—a program you shall have! I have included for you as many of my dances as there is room for, and I'll just call off the numbers I decide to do as we go along . . ."

Tickets are available at Stevens & Son Jewelers and at the door tonight.
