Don't Look Now...

but... Ever notice that the people who laugh when us poor bi-focal-wearing souls throw back our heads to read, are the very ones who frantically hunt for their reading glasses every time a few written words come into sight?

Rattle dabble... Now they are really going in for the double standard. Our legislators are planning to discriminate against us lady ratters with one hand, while they pay us equal wages for equal work with the other.

Political cold shoulder... We received a letter this week, with an extra filipp that hurt. Addressed Maxine Buren, Statesman, Salem, Oregon, it had been stamped in big, red, cruel words "Unknown at State-house."

One-armed driver... Driving alongside another car in which a young man chatted with a very young lady standing on the seat beside him, meanwhile dangling a hand into the back seat and over the eyes of another passenger (sex unknown) reclining perhaps noisily in a bassinet back there, it occurred to us that big families of this generation have produced fathers more domesticated than ever before. Much more so than their grandfather's generation—that other age of large families.

Spartan... And don't think it didn't take strength of mind to resist using those gorgeously pink pills we're taking, when looking around for a garnish for green salad.

Maxine Buren

Mrs. E. C. Cazell, accompanied by Miss Shirley Cazell, Mrs. Charles Unruh and Miss Bertha Beckley, went to Eugene on Wednesday. Miss Cazell and Miss Beckley were chosen to play in the Northwest Music Conference concert at McArthur Court tonight.
