

young artists

By CARL HALL

It should come as no surprise that the young who are creatively involved are the happy ones, the affirmative ones. They are greedy to know life, they gorge themselves on esthetics, thoughts, ideas, because they know they can invest these areas with form and meaning, whether it be in a painting, short story, poem or song. They find that they have a grip on life, they feel they can fight it, test it, and through joy and struggle achieve a personality, a self. They break free from the ominous sounding term "crowd" to become individuals that feel a moral bond with life and not snared or trapped by it.

The above thoughts run through my mind when I read some of the biographical material that I receive for this column. Of all the letters I have received so far June Lytle has given me the most satisfaction, and since it was a fine, sincere and confident letter I wish to reproduce it in full.

"Somewhere, sometime, within my seventeen and a half years, I began to draw. My early childhood was spent in Albany, Oregon. I was a Tomboy and led a gang of Fellas. This didn't give me much time or thought for art. But at the age of ten, I moved to Salem, curled my hair, and became a girl. (Yet, with no fewer boisterous activities).

I had my first studio in our basement where I gave free drawing lessons to the younger children of the neighborhood. Since I set up this first studio six years ago, I've gone through many phases of drawing, as I have phases of life. It is an interesting thing—every phase of life a young girl between the ages of ten and seventeen goes through is recorded in my drawings through the years. Someday I hope to write a book on this subject.

The Future: I plan to graduate from college then attend Chouinard Art Institute for further training. Someday I hope to be rated among the world's best cartoonists."

About the crayon drawing reproduced at the right, she has this to say: "When rendering this idea, I picked several colors (rich reds, greens, purples and blues) which in themselves were pleasing, but clashed when put one against another. I planned to separate these colors with heavy black lines, designed so that when viewing the piece of work the onlooker unconsciously would not be able to decide whether he liked these colors or not.

This would bring about the same emotion the man in the drawing was feeling about life. He wants life yet he would like to escape the confusion. He's too blind to know that underneath confusion lies the calm."

June Lytle, a senior student of Mrs. Opal Berry in South Salem High's art department, is a very talented girl, excelling in all creative fields, drama, writing, and of course, painting.

Nancy Wilson Married in Chevy Chase

From the East comes news of the marriage of Miss Nancy Lee Wilson, daughter of Rear Admiral Ralph Ensign Wilson, USN, and Mrs. Wilson of Chevy Chase, Maryland, to Walter Wright Rule Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wright Rule of Buck Lane, Haverford, Pa., which took place on Saturday, April 16 at All Saints' Episcopal Church in Chevy Chase.

The bride is the granddaughter of the late Rev. Charles H. Powell, one time rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Salem, and Mrs. Powell and of the late Mr. and Mrs. William E. Wilson of Salem. She is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Neer, also of Salem.

The Rev. Frederick H. Arterton, rector of All Saints', performed the rites at 2:30 o'clock, assisted by the Rev. John E. Owens of Prince Frederick, Maryland. The altar was banked with bouquets of white tulips and lilacs flanked by cathedral tapers. The handsome bridal gown was of deep ivory satin fashioned on classic lines with a full train. She wore her mother's veil, a Spanish lace mantilla, which was brought from Spain by the bride's father on a Midshipman cruise. She carried a bouquet of cream roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Rear Admiral Wilson gave his daughter in marriage.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Wilson selected a gown of Alice blue crystalet with a small hat draped with matching Chantilly lace and corsage of deep red throated cymbidium orchids. The bridegroom's mother chose a silver blue taffeta gown with white hat and corsage of lavender baby orchids.

Reception at Officers Club
The wedding reception was held at the Walter Reed Officer's Club in Washington, D. C.
