YWCA review . . .

MRS. THEODORE JENNY

April 24-30 has been designated as National YWCA week, but coming as it does at Centennial as well as convention time, no special observance is planned locally.

Specially proclaimed weeks throughout the year, overlapping one another and filling the calendar are, of course, for the prime purpose of focusing attention, but the YW in Salem—particularly with the facilities the fine new building offers—is becoming such an integral part of so many lives, that every week is Y week!

Their diversified program has something to offer to all. The civic-minded find here a medium for community service and add its activities to an already busy social schedule . . . for many others the Y is the hub of their social and cultural life—to the teen-agers it offers splendid companionship and wonderful pursuits to satisfy their tremendous energies . . .

The Golden Agers arrive for their day—the women with their lovely white hair so beautifully done and a look of pleased expectancy on their faces—while at the same time "sweet young things" are in the gym bending and stretching rhythmically during a course in modern dance and women on the mezzanine are absorbed in creating all sorts of lovely things in the textile painting class.

Now, there is something doing NOW at the Y that YOU would find interesting. Although one hundred years old in 1955, the Y movement has kept abreast of the times, including activities of current interests and meeting changing needs. In addition, it can be a "home away from home" for the girl who finds her job away from her family and moves into the delightful residence rooms.

Their program gives wives a "holiday from apron strings" and are "hep" to the interests of the business girl and the teens. This is National YWCA week—a good time for you to join in the fun at Salem's Y.
