

Department Heads Tour New Meier & Frank Store

Department heads for the Meier and Frank Salem store went touring Thursday through the new block-square structure where they are scheduled to begin work when the store opens in October. Here Gerald Frank, (with megaphone) who will manage the Salem establishment, describes features of the store to the group on one of the parking ramps at the east end of the building. Some 35 department heads made the trip to Salem by bus for the tour, guided by Frank. Opening date for the two-story building is expected to be in late October. (Statesman Photo).

New Process Delays New Bill Signing

Adoption by the recent legislature of a plan under which enrolled bills were printed in the state printing department rather than typed in the Senate and House engrossed and enrolled bill rooms apparently has slowed down arrival of bills at the governor's office for final signature or veto.

It previously was argued that the new plan would expedite the all-over bill procedure. Records show that no bills were received at the governor's office from May 5, one day following adjournment of the recent legislature, until Tuesday of this week.

The enrolled bills, under the new procedure, after being printed in the state printing office, are returned to the Senate and House for proof reading and signature of the presiding officers before being sent to the governor.

All bills had been received at the governor's office within six days after the close of the 1953 legislature.

State finance department director Harry Dorman said there probably would be some saving to the state under the new setup because of retaining bill type for use in printing the legislative journals.
