Pinky Lee's Brown Is a One-Man Crowd

By EVE STARR
HOLLYWOOD—PROFILE: Versatile Jimmy Brown of NBC's daily Pinky Lee Show is a guy with more disguises than a chameleon trapped in a kaleidoscope.

At any given moment in the course of a week's half-hour program, Jimmy is apt to pop up as any one of 25 funny characters, who have in common only their ability to bedevil Pinky Lee—to the delight, of course, of Lee's child audience.

You might call Jimmy the Lon Chaney of TV, except that Throckmorton T. Throckmorton (his Shakespearean actor) Pizza Pete (his mad chef) or Callahan (his Irish cop) never frightened anybody. On occasion, however, Brown's disguises have fooled his own wife.

Recently he decided to add a new character to his stable, an obnoxious 12-year-old brat. When he got home that evening his wife asked him who the new man was on the show. "They had some guy doing a 12-year-old kid," she said.

A native of Georgia, Brown is shy and serious, in contrast to the loud extroverts he parades before Pinky Lee's small-fry audience.
