

Diluted Version of Military Reserves Bill Makes Debut

WASHINGTON — A highly diluted military reserve bill was introduced in the House by Rep. Vinson (D-Ga.) Monday as a substitute for a stalled administration measure.

The Vinson version drops the controversial provision for a special six-months training corps for teen-age volunteers, which was the heart of the administration plan.

It also removes proposed authority for the President to call up a maximum of one million reservists without consulting Congress.

And it eliminates a controversial National Guard section, to which an anti-segregation rider was attached by Rep. Powell (D-NY), one of the three Negroes in the House. It was this rider which caused the original bill to be side-tracked.

President Eisenhower has said it is terrifically important to have an enlarged reserve program for the armed forces, but the White House had no comment immediately on Vinson's substitute. Vinson is chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Sees Approval

The House GOP leader, Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, said he approved of the new bill and added, "I think it will be passed."

The original bill provided for a two-million-man expansion of the organized reserves by 1960, largely through the volunteer training program. After their six months training, the volunteers would have been required to spend 7 1/2 years in the reserves.

The Vinson bill is aimed at building a ready reserve force of 2,900,000. Under present law, the reserve is limited to 1,500,000 men.

Vinson said that his measure would produce a strong, virile reserve made up of two men who, for the most part, will have had at least two years of active duty.

From Servicemen

In other words, the reserves under the Vinson bill would be drawn mostly from the ranks of servicemen who completed their tours of active duty instead of from young trainees.

The Vinson bill would also reduce the total military obligation for all service men from eight years to six.

Vinson called a meeting of his committee for Tuesday to consider the substitute. He predicted quick approval.

There would be no assignment of reservists to National Guard units under the Vinson plan. This may not please Eisenhower, who has said the National Guard needs more men thoroughly grounded in military training.

Turnabout Witness Gets Jail Sentence

WASHINGTON — Turnabout witness Marie Natvig was jailed Monday under a sentence of eight months to two years for lying under oath in the Communication Commission's Edward Lamb hearing.

U. S. District Judge Alexander Holtzoff fixed what he called a "moderate" sentence on the gray-haired 51-year-old Miami Beach grandmother and divorcee.

The judge turned down pleas by Mrs. Natvig's attorney that she be given a sentence calling only for a probation, and that she be allowed to remain free on bond pending an appeal.

Mrs. Natvig was a witness last fall at a Communications Commission hearing on Lamb's application for renewal of his license for a television station at Erie, Pa. She testified that she was a Communist in Ohio in the 1930's and knew Lamb in that connection.

In February, when she was recalled to the witness stand for further cross-examination, she said her previous testimony about Lamb was a lie.

Mrs. Natvig said she had been coerced into giving the original testimony by Walter R. Powell Jr., a former commission attorney.
