Wheat Quota Vote Larger Than Expected

By LILLIE L. MADSEN
Farm Editor, The Statesman
When the final national reports on the wheat referendum came in at the close of the week, they showed that wheat quotas passed by a considerably bigger margin than expected.
Wheat growers favored marketing quotas by a national average of almost 3 1/2 to 1 in the referendum. North Dakota, with one-fifth of the total votes cast in the nation, voted 20 to 1 in favor of quotas. Oregon was slightly below the national average, at 3 to 1 in favor. Only four of the smaller wheat states voted against quotas, while nine more approved by less than the 2 to 1 majority necessary on a national level. Only about a third of the farmers eligible across the country bothered to go to the wheat polls to vote.
The national average support rate has been announced at 2 cents higher than the minimum rate announced last year . . . or $2.08 a bushel. The raise, just announced July 1, was made possible by an increase in the parity price of wheat as of June 15. The minimum terminal support rates will also be increased by 2 cents a bushel.

Vets Colony Family Seeks New Home

One of the Salem Housing Project families looking for another place to live these days is the W. W. Statler family pictured above in the neat but crowded kitchen-dining-living space of their two-bedroom apartment. Looking on while Mrs. Statler does the family ironing are daughters, Janet, 10; Donna, 7, holding Terri Ann, two months, and son, Woody, 2. Another daughter, Margaret, 14, was berry-picking. Overcross Trial Draws Crowd of Spectators

By VINITA HOWARD
Staff Writer, The Statesman
As door bailliff during the Casper Overcross first degree murder trial, Bill Barlow, Willamette University law student, has something many courtroom spectators must have envied since the trial began June 21—he has a good seat for every day of what promises to be Marion County's lengthiest trial in recent history.
It's Barlow's job to handle the standing-room only crowds which have been packing Circuit Judge George R. Duncan's courtroom daily since opening day.
Age Limit
The crowds have been so large, in fact, that Judge Duncan has set an age limit for admittance. Only those over 15 years old can attend.
"Twice," Barlow said, "I've had to turn away the nine-year-

Nurses' Aide Course Due

A free course, designed to train girls and women to become nurses' aides, will start July 11 at Salem Memorial Hospital.
"This course," said Mrs. Adam Lefor, supervisor of nurses, "will stress basic training procedure. It will be held three times a week for three hours each session. Applicants need not have had any previous nursing or hospital experience."
Three-fourths of the members in previous classes are now employed as nurses' aides at the hospital. Others use the knowledge gained for home nursing. No obligation to work is implied in the training course.
The courses are not only for women who want to make extra money working as their full- or part-time aides, but also for young girls who are interested in professional nursing as a career.
Applicants may contact the hospital any time after July 5 to register.
Salem, along with all other sections of the United States, is experiencing a shortage of nurses and nurses' aides, local hospital officials say.
An appeal has gone out to retired nurses in this area to make themselves available for either part-time or full-time nursing.

Illegal Liquor Charge Facing Three Youths

Two 17-year-old boys and 19-year-old Edward Tarr, all of Albany, were charged with illegal possession of intoxicating liquor early Sunday when Salem police halted a car on South Commercial for having expired license plates.
Officers said several bottles of beer were in the vehicle. Tarr paid $25 bail, the others $35 bail on the charge.

First year students are: Robert Batchelder, Lake Grove; Richard Coggin, Coos Bay; and Russell Day, Gold Hill.
Second year students are: George Juba, Salem, Kenneth Holmes, Albany; and John Patrick McConnell, Decatur, Ill.

Professors at OSC Author 96 Books

OREGON STATE COLLEGE — If only the books written by faculty members were used in classes in Oregon State College, students would still have a stack of nearly 100 texts covering a wide range of subjects, an OSC book list reveals.
Ninety-six books now currently in print carry the names of OSC professors as authors. Many of them are standard references in classrooms across the country. One chemistry book, for example, is used by 155 different colleges and a history book is used by high school students in almost every state.
OSC teachers can claim 27 books in the various branches of science, 25 in the liberal arts fields, 12 in education, 8 in forestry, 7 in home economics and agriculture, 5 in engineering and others in business, pharmacy, liberal science and administration.
The book list does not include the hundreds of bulletins, circulars and papers written each year by staff members for the agricultural experiment station and extension service, the engineering and forest experiment stations, for scientific journals or for magazines.

Proposed Closure of Housing Unit Draws Tenants' Protest

By CONRAD PRANGE
Staff Writer, The Statesman
Some 61 families now at the Salem Veterans Housing Colony may have to move soon, and most of them say they don't know where to go.
The local Housing Authority, which operates the project originally started as a veterans' emergency program, has ordered all tenants to vacate by Sept. 1. Plans are to tear down the buildings and to dissolve the project, located in Southeast Salem around 16th and Cross Sts.
Colony residents have protested the proposed closure and have taken the matter up with city authorities. Nobody has rescinded the vacation order, though.
Large Families
"Most of these families have four or five kids and one has nine," says Robert H. Niemeyer, project manager. "Consequently they don't want to pay more than $40 or $50 per month rent."
Niemeyer said he, personally, answered a "good number" of "houses for rent" ads, "but could not find anything" suitable, either in price or space, for his tenants. Units at the colony rent for $35 per month.
He estimated about half the heads of the 61 families at the project are unemployed. This includes several elderly couples. Some families are on welfare rolls, said Niemeyer.
Seek Rentals
"If there are any local landlords who have rentals they think we will be interested in, we would be glad to hear from them," said Niemeyer, whose Salem Housing Authority office is located at 1200 S. 16th St.
A group of tenants who have, they say, tried to find rentals elsewhere in Salem all claim they faced two major problems — high rents and too many children.
Most of the house-hunting, apparently has been done in person or by phone. "Only one person indicated she had contacted a real estate office. Many local realtors maintain there are adequate rentals in Salem to take care of the housing project families, if and when they move.
To Fit Budget
Mrs. Walter Harris, who has one child, said she and her husband have been hunting for a house to rent to fit their budget for the past year or so. She said she located a small house last January, but it slipped away from her.

"Others," she said, "have higher rents and are not as good as these units."
Mrs. Clair A. Hayes, 1138 S. 17th St., said she has made "several calls" in search of a new home for herself, her part-time employed husband and their five children.
Rent too High
"Most of the rents were too high for us," she said.
Mrs. W. W. Statler, 1246 Aiken Dr., is looking for a three-bedroom home for her family of one husband and five children.
"One landlord had a three-bedroom house but he said he did not want renters with children," she said. "Houses which rent in the $35 to $50 class are usually too beat-up or too small. Other rents are too high. We have offered to paint and clean up older houses before moving in, but can't seem to get a landlord to cooperate."
Mr. and Mrs. Wells Gunn, who have been picking strawberries to make ends meet, say they "have looked around some" for another place to live but have not found anything satisfactory.
Wood Supply
A tenant who hasn't bothered looking for another place to live and who isn't going to leave the project until he must is 80-year-old John Buechler.
Buechler is particularly disturbed by the order because he recently purchased his winter's supply of wood — six cords of it. Neighbors cut and piled it for him next to his unit.
"Where would I take all that wood, if I have to move?" he asks.

Driver Cited After Wreck

A Portland man was charged with reckless driving early Sunday after an auto went out of control in the 2400 block of State Street, skidded several feet on the sidewalk, took out some shrubs and came to rest with its rear end atop a power pole guy wire, report Salem police.
Driver of the car, listed as Howard B. Hansen, was not injured. The accident sheared off one of the auto's wheels, said police, and the rest of the auto incurred extensive damage.
Hansen was held and $150 bail set.

Youths Arrested On Liquor Count

A 16-year-old Salem boy and two 17-year-old Independence lads were charged with illegal possession of liquor after Salem police stopped a car in the 1200 block of S. 12th Street early Sunday.
Beer was found in the car, said officers. All paid $35 bail on the charge and were released.

Bird Steals Man's Glasses

SMOOTH ROCK FALLS, Ont. (AP) — A bushworker recently lost a workmen's compensation claim for a pair of glasses.
He took off his spectacles and put them on a stump while he sat to eat his lunch. Before he could get so much as a bite of his bologna, he spied a weew hisky jack flying off with the glasses.
Claims officers told him his case was one for the birds.
