Artists will Exhibit at Salem Art Fair in Bush Park Aug. 27

Plans are expanding rapidly for the Salem Art Fair to be held Saturday, August 27 at Bush Park, according to Mrs. Esthel Benner, general chairman of the Salem Art Association function. The program now includes the sale of original art objects, a special auction event, several folk dancing exhibitions, music and refreshments.

Nucleus of the affair are the artists of the Salem area who have brought national and regional recognition to Salem by their work. Already signed up to exhibit are Carl Hall, who was cited by Life magazine as one of America's promising young painters, and who is represented in collections of national importance, such as the Whitney Museum in New York City.

Clifford Gleason, whose mastery of subtle and dramatic color in oils has made his work widely shown in the west in such places as the Maxwell Galleries in San Francisco, Portland Art Museum, Los Angeles and Colorado.

Charles Medcalf, who recently was seen in a one man show at the Bush Museum; and who is a designer as well as a painter, will bring works over from Silverton, where he is with the art department of the high school.

Many artists to exhibit. The European influence will be represented by Raimon Stappans, Latvian refugee who has studied at the Stuttgart Art School in Germany. In contrast, the American scene will be represented by Jerry Stone, who paints sports scenes and cartoons, and who has been named an Artist of Oregon by participation in the All-Oregon Show of the Portland Art Museum.

Other artists of Oregon to offer works for sale at the Art Association Fair are Miss Martha Redd, who does strong black and white ink paintings and brilliantly colored miniatures, and Miss Judy Wolf, who has been included in the All-Oregon Print Show, and who produces in a wide range of mediums.

Other student artists to show are Jack Eyerly, who is attending the University of Colorado on an art scholarship and Jim Shull, who is at the University of Oregon on a similar award.

Specializing in etching and print making is the Rev. Melville Wire, who also is well known for his delicately detailed water colors. Mrs. S. B. Laughlin, who conducts classes in art for children, and who has exhibited in the Salem area will be present.

Other Art Fields Included

The art committee for the Art Fair urges all individuals who work in the creative art fields and who might have something ready to exhibit or to sell to contact them to exhibit and participate in the event. Mrs. Esthel Benner and Clifford Gleason are in charge.

Other art fields to be included in the Art Fair are weaving, ceramics, leather work, shell jewelry and copper enamel. Bowls, plates, trays, bracelets, earrings but... we wonder whatever becomes of the hundreds of sweet little quail that get borned every year out our way and run frantically across the road as we near home. The number of adults seems to stay about the same, so some skunk must be getting more than his share...

Figuratively speaking... the Soviets think we all look and act like Marilyn Monroe over here anyway, so she might as well go over to Russia let 'em have a first hand look. This is Capitalism?

Old days... seeing the swimming and picnicking going on down at the foot of the bridge reminds us that we learned to swim down in that old river—as did others in our set. I've dog-paddled across the river and back more than once. We were great canoists in later years—what ever became of all the canoes that were popular in the early 20s anyway?

High production... seems that this summer's crop of brides has succeeded all others, not limiting itself to the good old month of June, but wait until the war babies get old enough to step to the altar!

Provocative, ain't we... Ever look to see what's on the back of the traffic signals on the one-way streets? ... Maxine Buren

Stage Set for Pentacle Play Poses Problems

Twisted copper tubing, a steers' head and revolver suspended from the ceiling will suggest a Western scene for the Pentacle Theater's production of Girl Crazy, beginning a nine-day run Friday, August 26.

Girl Crazy was a popular Broadway musical and will be played in the Pentacle Theater Barn on Dallas Road.

The stage, sets, especially designed by Al Lau, technical director, will include seven distinct changes, made by use of a trapdoor in the ceiling. The theater-in-the-round has posed considerable of a problem in this play, which necessitates so many changes.

Besides the suspended pistols and livestock, the imagination of the audience will get a workout with transparent doors, suspended arches, posters of bullfights and other paraphernalia necessary to

Flooring has been added to take care of the dance routines, impossible on the sawdust covered ground which sufficed for other productions. The technical ingenuity of Lau was supported by that of Dan Boone who constructed the sets.

Girl Crazy is the third of the Pentacle Theater's summer productions and will conclude the series. This is the group's first try at a full-scale musical comedy, but with Bob Putnam's usual originality in directing and production, regular Pentacle Theater goers are anticipating a highly scintillating performance.
