Cardinals Top Bears 21 to 6

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—The Chicago Cardinals downed their crosstown rivals, the Bears, 21-6 in an exhibition game here Saturday night in the Gator Bowl.

An estimated 24,000 persons saw the Cardinals strike three times under the impetus of long runs by Ollie Matson and Dave Mann and the passing of LaMar McHan.

The Cardinal touchdowns topped off sustained drives of 77, 72 and 97 yards. The Bears made all their points on two field goals kicked by George Blanda, former Kentucky player, in the first half.

Pat Summerall, a Lake City, Fla., player who performed during his college days at Arkansas, kicked three straight extra points for the cardinals.

The Bears scored first on Blanda's 35-yard field goal soon after the second quarter started. The Cardinals forced an end on a 77-yard push that ended with fullback Johnny Olszewski running 25 yards for the score.

Just before halftime, Blanda booted his second field goal, a 37-yard kick, leaving the Bears trailing one point at the midway mark. Mann, former Oregon State gridder, topped off a second Cardinal drive that carried 72 yards in six plays for the touchdown. He carried it over from five yards out after taking a lateral from Olszewski.

Mann and Matson led the Cardinals to their third touchdown in the final quarter on long dashes which highlighted a 97-yard thrust. Mann ran the last 10.

Jaycee Junior Crowns Swept

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—California completed a sweep of the titles in the International Jaycee Junior Golf Tournament Saturday when Phil Rodgers of San Diego finished one stroke ahead of Jack Luke of Waterloo, Iowa, with a record 287.

The victory by Rodgers, a stocky, blond, 17-year-old, gave California's delegation the trophies for triumphs in the main championship, the "B" division, the team competition and the driving contest.

Dick Carmody of Long Beach won the "B" title after two playoff rounds, scoring a 70 Saturday compared with an 80 by Raymond Streeter of Topeka, Kan.

Rodgers, runnerup in this tournament last year, made good his prediction he would capture the 1955 crown as he fired rounds of 66-70-75-287.

Brows Edge Packers, 13-7

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—The Cleveland Browns, with a touchdown by fullback Fred Morrison and two field goals by Lou Groza, won an exhibition football victory over the Green Bay Packers Saturday night 13-7.

It was the first exhibition game of the season for the National League champs, while Green Bay was playing its second after a victory over the New York Giants.

Groza's field goals proved the decisive factor in Saturday night's game.

The Packers got the first touchdown in the opening quarter when quarterback Tobin Rote sneaked over from the one-yard line.

The big play of the touchdown drive came when Bill Houton faked to get clear and take a Rote pass for 44 yards to the Cleveland 10. An offside penalty cost Green Bay five yards, but Rote came back with a sideline pass to Al Carmichael on the one.

The Browns went ahead in the second quarter as Morrison rammed eight yards after a 63-yard march down the field. Groza connected with his first field goal in that quarter from the 15-yard line, and booted his second from the 20-yard line in the third period.

Packers 7 0 0 0-7

Dr. Lee plans to retire from the Army Medical Corps this fall after 12 years of service. He said he would fight the exclusion move "as a matter of principle." (AP Wirephoto)

Farm Income Drops; Political Trouble for Republicans Forecast

By OVID A. MARTIN
Associated Press Farm Reporter
WASHINGTON (AP)—Some politicians with an eye on next year's presidential election are expecting a declining level of farm prices and income to cause the Republicans a lot of trouble.

In attaching political significance to the farm situation, they point to many past elections in which unhappy farmers—by holding a balance of power in key states—were able to swing the results one way or another.

They cite the 1948 election, when President Harry A. Truman won an upset victory over New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey largely on the basis of Midwestern farm votes.

Much has been said and written about declining farm prices during the past two years, but just how seriously these declines have affected farm living standards is a question—particularly the standards in states where the farm votes could figure prominently in the 1956 election results.

The Agriculture Department has just completed a study of farm living standards in the various states. This study raises the suggestion that it might be hazardous to generalize on how farmers' economic status might affect next year's voting.

The study ranked the farm living standards on the basis of (1) the percentage of farms with electricity in each state, (2) the percentage with telephones, (3) the percentage with automobiles and (4) the purchasing power of farm products sold from the average farm in the area.

The department said that while this is not the only way to measure how well farmers live, it is a "practical method" of indicating the general improvement made, both for particular areas and for the country as a whole.

Up Before going into the picture of the standards of living of farmers in particular states, it should be recognized that for the country as a whole, levels of living for farm operator families have gone up more than one third in the past 10 years. At least that is what the department survey shows.

The rate of increase has slackened somewhat since 1950—a period marked by readjustments from high wartime demands for farm products—but not at the same rate for all areas.

The part of the survey which carries particular significance is the picture painted of living standards in key states where the farm vote in the past has played major roles in election outcomes.

Those states include Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

In no other seven agricultural states is the farm living standard as high as it is there.

Ranked by Fifths
The survey ranks the states as to whether they are in the highest fifth, next to the high fifth, the middle fifth, next to the lowest fifth and the lowest fifth.

Illinois and Iowa, for instance, are ranked among the top fifth. Other states in this class include California, Washington, Kansas, Nebraska, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Of further significance, the survey shows that all of the states "classed below average in the farm living standard are predominantly Democratic. Most of these are in the so-called 'Solid South.'"

Virtually all of those in the top fifth or next to the top fifth are states which are normally classed as Republican or pivotal. In the group classed as next to the top fifth are Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Utah, Nevada, Wyoming, Oregon and Idaho.

Sight-Seers, Flies Bother Tornado Town

UDALL, Kan.—(UP)—Since UDALL was almost wiped from the map by Kansas' worst killer tornado on May 25 the town's biggest problems have been sight-seers and flies.

The curious come in their cars by the thousands on weekends. The flies also by the thousands, are on hand every day. They buzz about the faces of busy determined men and women at work rebuilding after disaster.

To date the death toll is 80. Some of the more than 300 injured remain in critical condition in hospitals.

But one new citizen of the town already has made an appearance. David Lynn Boyd, whose mother survived the storm, was born at Wichita and promptly was nicknamed "Tornado" by family friends.

Sunday is a day of work in Udall now, and it is necessary for guards to hold back the tourists who otherwise would clutter the streets and interfere with the rebuilding of old homes and the erection of new ones.

Co-Workers Help
The Lester Grants' two-story brick home was ruined, but a frame house they had rented out was left standing although damaged. It is being remodeled. Later they plan to rebuild on the site of the destroyed residence.

The walls went up quickly for the new Jean Foote home. He's a worker at the Boeing Airplane Co. plant at Wichita and each week-end 20 to 30 of Boeing employees have turned out to help Foote build the house.

Workers at two other Wichita aircraft factories, Beech and Cessna, are aiding three more Udall families construct new homes.

One of the first structures to rise after tons of debris were cleared up by bulldozers was a new "city hall." It's a temporary, makeshift building, with unpainted plasterboard partitions for city offices.

City Clerk John M. Arbuckle sat at his desk, swatted flies and said: "There's not much news—we're just coming along as best we can. Our biggest problem is still keeping people out of town. They even stop on the highway, blocking traffic, to take pictures."

Bank Deposits Up
The odor of cooking wafted through the frame building, built in a day shortly after the tornado. It came from the Red Cross canteen, and prompted Mrs. Francis Thompson, Arbuckle's assistant, to comment, "Those Red Cross people have done a wonderful job."

At the other end of "City Hall," the temporary post office was a busy spot. T. F. Hildebrand, president of the Udall Bank of Commerce is full of confidence in the town's rehabilitation. The bank building was spared by the storm.

Bank deposits, increasing daily are nearly $1,000,000. When the tornado struck they were just $504,000. Demolition insurance payments provided the fresh money. Hildebrand hired two more employees.

There's another business booming too. An elderly little woman, Mrs. C. E. Grey of Dewey, Okla., set up a stand and sells postcards of the tornado-torn town. The pictures were taken not long after the big wind hit.

On a recent Sunday she, her husband and son, who live in a trailer outfitted with photographic equipment, sold sight-seers some 2,500 postcards at 10c each.

"This is our 20th storm," Mrs. Grey said.

Cowboy Game Pays Off in Full-Time Job

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES, N. M. (AP)—When Mike Kirk, 17, was a toddler in Cincinnati and Indianapolis he played cowboy with the other youngsters. When he moved west with his parents, he began to meet youngsters from farm and ranch families for whom the cowboy role was not a game, but the real thing.

He visited their homes, saw their money to buy boots like they wore, and eventually got a vacation job on a ranch. Even the fact that much of the work turned out to be muddy chores in fields and irrigation ditches failed to mar the glamor.

Finally he met Art Evans, manager of a big ranch, and arranged for spare-time work there during his senior year in high school. He lived at the ranch, part of his duties being to drive ranch children to school.

Now he has a full-time ranch job. He plans to work until he is drafted. He's saving his money and after he completes his military tour hopes to "get started on my own."

Koreans Stone Countrymen in New Wave of Demonstrations

SEOUL (AP)—Koreans demonstrating against the continued presence of U. S. troops in their country stoned their own countrymen Saturday while President Syngman Rhee was issuing a new warning against violence. A crowd of 300 at the West Coast port of Kusan huddled rocks at truckloads of Korean employees leaving the American air base compound.
