Not all Salem's annual air show was in the air Sunday with displays of aircraft and a Nike missile drawing attention of a steady stream of McNary Field spectators. This "air" view of the accumulated aircraft and early spectators was taken from the Airport control tower. Large plane in the picture is an Air Force C-54 transport. Several thousand persons jammed the field to see the show Sunday and to honor Lee Eyerly, Salem air pioneer who is credited with giving the city its start to aviation prominence. ## IT SEEMS TO ME

By Charles A. Sprague

The flags of 60 nations will be flying Tuesday in front of United Nations headquarters on East River, New York City. Gathering will be the representatives of the nations whose flags are flung to the breeze for the 10th session of the General Assembly of United Nations. They will meet in an atmosphere considerably more relaxed than in recent years. The anniversary session at San Francisco last summer captured some of the benevolent impulses which prompted the drafting of the Charter in 1945. The subsequent conference of four major powers at Geneva did more to promote a conciliatory spirit. It is hardly to be expected that any nation will purposefully pluck the feathers from the doves of peace at this session of the Assembly. Perhaps no concessions will be made, and there were none at Geneva, but surely the acerbities that have marked debates in previous sessions will be fewer and less sharp.

The Assembly draws Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, and Foreign Minister Molotov of the USSR has already arrived in New York. Whether Foreign Secretary Macmillan will come from England has not been announced. The French foreign minister doubtless is detained as the cabinet wrestles with its own colonial problems.

This 10th Assembly is one to decide whether to call for a revision of the U.N. Charter. The weight of opinion is (Continued on editorial page, 4.)

Commies Free Oregon Man

HONG KONG (AP) — The Rev. Levi A. Lovegren, an American Baptist missionary from Cherry Grove, Ore., crossed into Hong Kong territory Monday after nearly five years' imprisonment in Red China on espionage charges.

The Rev. Mr. Lovegren was the seventh American released in the past four days by the Reds, who promised at the ambassadorial talks in Geneva to turn loose 10 U.S. civilians held in jail or under house arrest, as well as 12 others previously denied exit permits.

Three U.S. Roman Catholic priests were freed by the Chinese Sunday. Pale and underweight, they told of poor food and long questioning during more than two years of house arrest.

Double Amputee Motorist Killed

EFFINGHAM, Ill. (AP) — A double amputee motorist was killed early Sunday when his car, specially fitted with hand controls, rammed the rear of a semi-trailer some 10 miles south of this Central Illinois community.

Dead is Francis O'Donnell, 43, of Mason, Ill. He lost both legs in World War II.

ANIMAL CRACKERS

Spectators at Salem's annual Air Show, some several thousands of them, were treated to a demonstration Sunday of a rescue of a down pilot from the sea by a helicopter. Lt. Cmdr. Ivan Esau, Dallas, Naval Air Reserve pilot, dangles from the pick-up strap lowered from the helicopter before being pulled up into the craft. A minor miscue brought a laugh to the big crowd. The pickup rope was inadvertently dropped while the helicopter was on the way to Esau's rescue, so they landed the craft at "sea"; the pilot got out and walked on the "water" to retrieve it. ## Diplomats Massing for U.N. General Assembly Crackdown Nets Juveniles In Portland

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U. N. Diplomats began massing here Sunday for Tuesday's opening session of the 10th U. N. General Assembly. Quick tests of U. S.-Soviet strength in between the Geneva Big Four meetings were in the works.

Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov arrived from Moscow to attend his first General Assembly working session since 1946, making one of his rare plane flights to get here in time for the meeting.

His arrival was expected to sharpen the clash over Red China's demand for a seat in the U. N., a fight he is expected to lose; over Communist Poland's contest for a Security Council seat against the U. S.-supported Philippines, where U. S. strength may be in danger; and over rival disarmament plans.

Fresh From Moscow
Molotov comes fresh from Moscow, where Saturday the Soviet Union promised to give back the Porkkala naval base to Finland. It was a move interpreted as strengthening Soviet demands that the United States also give up its bases in foreign lands.

U. N. diplomats expect Molotov to stress the new Soviet position on bases as a counter to the announced U. S. demand for unanimous Assembly approval of President Eisenhower's proposals to exchange aerial reconnaissance and defense blueprints to avert surprise attacks.

Disarmament Issue
Molotov also was expected to give the first hard indication in his policy speech next week on how the Russians will vote on that plan.

Disarmament is expected to be the biggest single topic in the Assembly but not until the Oct. 27 meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers at Geneva. Until that time delegates are expected to go along with the "Geneva spirit."

Another Good Day Forecast

A combination of bright sunshine and a tang in the air Sunday gave the Salem sector ideal weather conditions.

More fair weather is the prediction for today and Tuesday by forecasters at McNary Field. The Sunday maximum temperature was 74 and today's high reading is expected to rise slightly to around 77. Predicted minimum for tonight is near 42.

Fair conditions are also in the outlook for beaches today, though some morning fog is expected. Northerly winds will range from 5 to 15 miles an hour.

The fair, dry weather has resulted in some increase in forest fire danger in Western Oregon, it was reported.

Throng Sees Air Show at McNary Field

By THOMAS G. WRIGHT JR., Staff Writer, The Statesman

Salem air was full of aircraft and praise for one of the city's air pioneers Sunday as several thousand people turned out at McNary Field for Salem's annual Air Show.

Spectators jammed into Salem airport and lined adjacent highways to watch the show which included a spectacular helicopter "sea" rescue pickup, a parachute jump and a display of scores of military, commercial and private airplanes.

Despite the constant stream of planes landing and taking off during the three-hour program, sponsored by the Salem Optimist Club, there were no mishaps except for a couple of small children who got temporarily grounded away from parents.

Mobile Tower

A mobile CAA tower controlled the heavy air traffic which included the arrival and departure of a Navy fighter squadron from Seattle.

Eyerly, credited with nurturing flying interest in the mid-valley area, had his spot in the bright autumn sun in the formal part of the fast-moving program.

Gov. Paul L. Patterson paid him a pioneer's tribute and presented him a plaque on behalf of the people of Oregon. Chamber of Commerce President Elton Thompson presented him a certificate of achievement on behalf of the Chamber. And from the hands of Charles Barclay, airport manager and representing Mayor Robert White, he received a symbolic key to the city.

Air Curious

The area's air curious crawled over, under, in and around an Air Transport Service C54, a National Guard F86, helicopters, Navy fighters, and a wide variety of small commercial craft.

Favorable weather enhanced the show, drawing some 150 flying visitors to the airport for the day. Visiting fliers were treated to a "brunch" from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. when the program got underway with the "rescue" operation.

Carrier Landings

Activities moved through such other highlights as a simulated carrier landing and takeoff by the Navy Squadron, life raft drop by a Piper, and passes by an Air Force B29. Climax was an ear-splitting, smoke-spewing takeoff by the jet fighter enroute back to its base at Portland.

A stiff breeze complicated the parachute drop by Smoke-Jumper Richard Kreitzberg of Salem, but he anticipated the velocity and direction to near perfection, landing safely amid-field after a 3,000-foot descent.

Carolina Coast Reels Under 'Ione' Assault; Disaster Units Ready

Torrential Rains Add Threat of Floods

HATTERAS, N. C. (AP)—Hurricane Ione—third and most vicious to hit the East Coast within six weeks—smashed into the North Carolina beaches Sunday night.

Hurricane winds and high tides pounded the jutting coastline as storm-weary residents all along the Eastern Seaboard to New England rushed preparations against the threat of high winds and possible new floods.

Torrential rain poured down on the coastal areas as the front of the big storm reached land. Gusts up to 90 miles an hour were reported while the center of the hurricane—packing winds estimated at 125 miles an hour—was still miles at sea.

Booming waves and high tides ripped at the beaches, thrice plagued by hurricanes in less than a year.

Disaster workers were in position in the Carolinas and Virginia and alerted northward. Beaches were evacuated, shelters opened. Military planes moved inland, ships put to sea or moved to hurricane anchorages.

At 2 a. m. the Weather Bureau placed the storm center 100 miles south southwest of Cape Hatteras and the same distance east southwest of Wilmington, N. C.

125 Mile Wind
The bureau said winds were estimated at 125 miles an hour over a small area near the center, but hurricane force winds (75 miles an hour or more) cover an area around the center 75 miles in the western and 100 miles in the eastern semicircle.

Gales reach outward about 275 miles to the north and east and 160 miles to the south and west. Warnings Extended

The bureau extended its area of hurricane warning southward from Morehead City to Wilmington to embrace nearly the entire north Carolina Coast and the Virginia Capes.

A hurricane alert was in effect all the way from Myrtle Beach, S.C., to Provincetown, Mass., on the tip of famed Cape Cod. Storm warnings were up from Charleston to Atlantic City.

The Weather Bureau warned of exceptionally high tides and heavy rain. Tides were forecast up to 8 to 10 feet above normal, especially to the north and northeast of the storm's center.

Heavy rains were predicted for Eastern North Carolina and Virginia, probably as much as 3 to 6 inches near the hurricane center. The bureau warned Ione is a "severe hurricane."

Storm Rages Across Gulf Coast Town

TAMPICO, Mexico (AP)— Tampico was lashed Sunday night by winds of near hurricane force, a raging river, and pounding waves.

The government Weather Bureau said hurricane Hilda, with winds of over 100 miles an hour, hit Isla de Lobos, an island 60 miles southeast of Tampico, shortly before 7 p.m. (CST).

The government report predicted the storm would pass inland between Tampico and Tuxpan, an isolated area in which little damage would be done.

But officials here still expect the storm to strike in this immediate area Sunday night or early Monday.

In Tampico, high waves and a rising tide forced back Panuco River floodwaters to inundate new areas of the city, which had been fighting a record flood for two straight weeks.

Many residents fled to larger buildings in the center of town for protection.

A late report Sunday night said 20 new sections of Tampico had been flooded by the rising Panuco and by torrential rains which began at dawn.

The boy's battered body with a bullet hole in his head and a weight around his neck, was pulled from the Tallahatchie River a little over three weeks ago. (Story on page 2, sec. 1). (AP Wirephotos).

Argentina's Capital Saved by Blackout

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Driving rains and a blackout protected Buenos Aires Sunday night from threats of rebel warships to bombard the Argentine capital unless President Juan Peron resigned.

Three large warships steamed up the River Plate toward Buenos Aires earlier in the day on a mystery mission. A rebel fleet of river boats has been waiting in the wide Plate estuary, reportedly for a rendezvous with heavier-gunned ships from the ocean-going Navy.

Broadcasts from the rebel navy, plainly heard in Uruguay, during the day, said the fleet would shell Buenos Aires when the revolutionary high command decided it was advisable.

But crowds lining the river front Sunday night at Colonia, Uruguay, 40 miles across the Plate from Buenos Aires, could see no trace of the ships in the lightning flashes which broke the stormy darkness. Decries Threat

A communique from Peron's government decried the rebel threats to bombard the capital and declared Buenos Aires should be considered an open city. The rebel-held Puerto Belgrano radio replied that Buenos Aires was not entitled to such exemption because it is defended by troops and artillery.

The government for the second time announced the reconquest of Cordoba, strategic provincial capital of 350,000 people in North Central Argentina.

Uprising Put Down
The government also announced that loyal forces had put down an uprising in Tucuman, the capital of Tucuman Province, some 700 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

On the other side, a broadcast from Puerto Belgrano claimed the command of the 2nd army had joined in the revolt and seized control of the Western Argentine province of Mendoza, where it is headquartered.

Rebels in Control
Another rebel broadcast claiming to be from Mendoza itself said the rebels were in control of the provinces of San Juan and San Luis as well as Mendoza.

2 Prospectors Arrive Safely At Hospital

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Two elderly prospectors, who were lost for six days in the wilderness at the base of snow-capped Mt. St. Helens, were brought to a hospital here Sunday.

Attendants said both men, Charles Allger, 85, of Tacoma, Wash., and Charles Dickens, 70, of San Diego, Calif., were in "pretty good" condition despite their ordeal.

Both were resting and seemed satisfied to remain at the hospital. A 30-man party of stretcher bearers carried the two uranium prospectors four miles through rugged forest country early Sunday. They were met by an ambulance and brought here for treatment of exhaustion.

The old-timers were found two days after they generally had been given up for dead. A relative of one of them had posted a $1,000 reward for discovery of their bodies.

Three searchers found them 20 miles from the spot where the men were seen a week ago as they set out hopefully with a geiger counter. The trio found them in an area several miles from an old mine where search leaders were sure the men's bodies would be found under the dirt of fresh cave-ins.

4 Firemen Killed As Trucks Collide
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Four firemen were killed early Sunday in a collision between a fire truck and tractor-trailer truck in the worst accident of its kind in the history of the fire department.

The victims were the only men on the pumper truck.

Jets Collide; 3 Airmen Die
TORRINGTON, Wyo. (AP) — Three airmen died Sunday in the crash of two Wyoming National Guard jet airplanes after colliding in flight Sunday about five miles southwest of Torrington.

Two men crashed to earth in a T33 after the collision during a formation flight at 19,000 feet. A third pilot tried to parachute but his smashed body, still strapped in the ejection seat, was found 150 feet from the wreckage of his F80.
