'Suburban Delinquent' Newest U.S. Menace

By FRANK CAREY
Associated Press Science Reporter
CHICAGO (AP)—A new kind of juvenile delinquent—the "suburban delinquent"—is on the rise in America, a government expert said Monday.

And the urge among suburban parents to keep up with the Joneses is a contributing factor, Bertram M. Beck, director of the juvenile delinquency project of the U.S. Children's Bureau, told the opening of the 24th annual meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Most of the nation's children are reared today, he said, in steadily expanded communities of middle-class or upper-class people living in suburbs or near-suburbs of great cities.

"These are people," he declared, "on the move in a community on the move, both physically and psychologically."

Great Mobility
"They are part of the picture of great mobility that has marked the American population since World War I. They lack deep roots in their communities. These are essentially people who are seeking a better environment for themselves and their children."

And, often they are actively engaged in the struggle for power, prestige, and material gains," he said adding:
"The children of these people may be relatively free from social and economic deprivations, but they sometimes suffer from deprivation of parental guidance and attention—caused by their parents' preoccupation with competitive striving for success."

Delinquency Growth
"There has been a 'growth' of juvenile delinquency in such communities in recent years, he declared, adding that besides parental "preoccupation," other factors have played a role, with "world conditions" having a particular effect on suburban youth.

"Like all American youngsters," he said, "suburban youth faces the near-certainty of a period of military service."
"In the light of world events the length of that service may extend much farther than predicted. They cannot even tell for sure when they will be able to return to their homes and fulfill their life purposes."

"They are therefore denied the reward of achieving success, which in the past served in such communities to encourage conformity and the repression of open hostility."

Knocked-Down Auto
Premier Automobiles began this year the assembly of Italian Fiat automobiles imported in completely knocked-down condition under the Indian government's program of progressive manufacture. This program ousted both Ford and General Motors from the Indian market. It caused Automobile Products of India, which formerly held license to assemble and market British cars and trucks built by the British Rootes Group, to abandon that connection in favor of Italian scooters.

Today the firm concentrates on the assembly of scooters built in Italy and the production of automobile parts including brakes and clutches.

Imports Increase
The Indian government has boosted the import of scooter parts for assembly here by sharply slicing custom duties. Today Italian scooters assembled in India may be purchased at a price within range of the Indian middle-class buyer. Deluxe models of the vehicles sell in Bombay for rupees 1,750 ($368). A new factor, sales on the installment plan, has also been added.

Producers of these vehicles visualize a big Asian market for them not contemplated by their original designers. Add a wheel here and a frame there, and the Italian scooter, say the assembly experts here, soon becomes a "motor rickshaw" capable of carrying three or four passengers plus a driver.

Such vehicles are rapidly replacing the old hand-drawn or pedaled rickshaws on which many of Asia's millions once moved.

Air Chieftain Believes Flying Saucers Real
WEST HOATHLY, England (AP)—Air Chief Marshal Lord Dowding, 73, says he believes there are flying saucers from other planets, though he has never seen one.

The wartime boss of the British royal air force fighter command, a prominent spiritualist, declared in a lecture Sunday "The evidence is overwhelming."
He added, however, he doesn't expect flying saucer operators to land and tell their secrets to earthmen "until we have learned better manners."
