Season's End

Late Fruits, Vegetables Bolster Up Supply of Preserves, Pickles

By MAXINE BUREN

There's usually a last minute revival of the canning and pickling activities along about this time of year, when quinces, apples, pears and crabapples are ready and the pantry shelves may seem a bit short of stock.

Picklefruit is a handy recipe to know about, because you can do peaches, crabapples and pears, each making wonderful spicy garnishment for the meats during the winter. Here is a recipe for crabapples, peaches, pears or prunes.

SWEET PICKLED FRUIT

3 pounds fruit 1 cup water
4 cups sugar 1/4 stick cinnamon
1/2 cup vinegar 2 tablespoons whole cloves

Wash fruit but do not remove stems. Make syrup of sugar, vinegar and water, boil, add spices and a few of the fruit at a time. The fruit should have the cloves stuck into it. Cook until fruit is tender. Place fruit in sterilized jars, cook syrup down until the right consistency and pour over fruit that has been packed in jars. Seal. Keep for a month before using.

Some recipes suggest letting stand overnight in the syrup before bottling.

Ripe cucumber pickles use the season's last cucumbers and produce an interesting addition to the pickle assortment.

ASZHER PICKLES

Peel the 6 large, ripe cucumbers, cut in halves lengthwise and scrape out seeds with a spoon. Salt, and let stand overnight. Remove from liquid and let stand for an hour in clean cold water. Remove from water, wipe each cucumber. Can cut in half lengthwise if too large.

Put 1 quart vinegar, 1 cup water in a kettle and add a small package whole allspice, tied in a piece of cloth. Let come to a boil. Put in cucumbers and let heat until just hot through. If left too long cucumbers will soften. Put in hot sterilized jars with 1 teaspoon mustard seed and sprays of dill in each quart jar. Fill the jars with the syrup. Seal.

Here's a late summer pickle that will use some of those green tomatoes. It's pretty and bright in color and very good.

HOLLYHOCK PICKLES

3 pounds small green tomatoes 1 little mace
1 No. 2 1/2 can pineapple 1 cup pineapple juice
2 pounds sugar 1 tablespoon each: stick cinnamon, allspice, cloves
4 cups mild vinegar 2 tablespoons yellow mustard seed
1 cup honey

Cut tomatoes in rather thick slices and pineapple slices in quarters. Mix sugar, vinegar, honey, pineapple juice and spices in a bag. Bring to a boil and pour over pineapple and tomatoes. Cook until tender and clear. Put in jars, boil syrup down until right consistency, pour over fruit to overflow jars and seal.

TOMATO, APPLE AND GINGER MARMALADE

2 cups chopped apples 3 cups sugar
2 cups ripe tomatoes, chopped 1/4 cup chopped preserved lemon, ground ginger
1 lemon, ground

Combine tomatoes, apples and lemon and cook for 15 minutes. Add sugar and cook to the consistency of marmalade. Add ginger last 10 minutes of cooking.
