Folks in the Seattle area are getting an idea of what Elgin Baylor can do with a basketball, fast. In a tuneup outing with Johnny O'Brien's AAU outfit the other night, the transplanted College of Idaho Coyote whiz potted 37 points in the first half of play, and slacked off to only

35 the second half . . . Baylor cannot play for his new school, Seattle U, the coming season. He has to lay out a year because of his transfer . . . And how come no formal protests from the College of Idaho over losing the cage sensation? Dunno unless 'twould be that the Caldwell school might be aleared to holler thief in view of the way in which it reportedly secured Baylor in the first place

. . . The more one thinks of it the more one wonders why the heck the Sacramento bosses hired Tommy Heath as the new club manager. You'd think that the cellar-dwelling Sactos would want new blood - some guy who might be able to install some first division spirit into the sagging outfit. But they hired Heath, whose Coast League record with San Francisco isn't much better than the marks posted by the last three Solon skippers who have walked the

Vandal Frosh Not All From Idaho

We warned here awhile back that the Idaho Vandals would worth watching for basketball progress in the future, and after noting the who and where from on the school's freshman lineup, we accent it. Harlan Hodges secured some dandles from not only Idaho, but from Kentucky, Illinois and California as well, Have

John Liverans, 6-4, from Louisville, Ky., where he was named star of stars in the annual Kentucky-Indiana basketball classic; Lew Vesely, East St. Louis, Ill., All-Illinois guard; Whaylan Coleman, Owensboro, Ky., All-Kentucky forward; B. J. Schaffer, Santa Ana, Cal., All-California forward; John Willis, 6-7, Albin, Ill., and Tom Freeman, 5-10, Portland, Indiana. Included are a couple of 6-5 lads who stood out in Idaho prep play last semester . . .

While on basketball, might mention that the new 12-foot free throw lanes which go in as basketball court law the coming season. are to be used by the collegians and AAU players, but not by the high schoolers. The latter will still play on floors using the 6-foot lanes, unless the 12-footers are adopted by the various individual states for experimental purposes.

Thus high school play will be much the same as it has been in the past. But a considerable difference will be noted in the college both divisions. games. No more will the big boys be able to roost under the baskets for easy stuff-in points. They cannot be in the 12-foot area longer than with the championship playoff, bethree seconds at a time. Consequently, moving them farther away from tween the two division winners, the basket area will open up the "slot," so to speak, and the fast, hard-driving guards will be able to have much more of a scoring pic- Jan. 1, in the park of the Western nic than they've had in the past.

All of which should prove very interesting. We imagine that the reason the high school courts were left untithe six teams in the division extouched is because the prep game isn't nearly so influenced by the so-cept Detroit, which still hasn't called "goons" as is the collegiate portion of it . . .

We Hope to See Giants Play Today

Barring another unexpected (and rather conclusive) development in the neighborhood of Denver, we'll be en route to the National Association of Collegiate Commissioners Basketball Clinic this morning, flying via United Air Lines. The two-day clinic, during which the big wheels of the collegiate cage sport will again determine how the whistle-tooters will go about their chores the coming season, is to be held at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., which is but a short subway ride from Chicago. We'll be representing the Pacific Coast Conference.

But before going to Evanston we plan on visiting with our New York Giants football friends in Cleveland today, where they play Otto Graham & Co., the Browns, We've been invited to see the game from the Gignts' bench, and hope our presence will bring luck to the

I am writing this editorial for one purpose only; that is to express my sincere congratulations to the students, and especially the cheer dividual game of 234 and the high back for Oklahoma A&M in seven leaders of North Selem High school on their good sportsmanship. As most everyone knows, Albany recently played North Salem at North Salem, and the incident I want to relate happened during the third

Our cheer leaders exchanged a yell at that time with our opponents' cheer leaders, but just as the North Salem rooters started to lead us in a yell, we made our third touchdown. Of course at such a crucial moment we weren't paying much attention to their cheer leaders, who were in an understandably awkward position when we started yelling, "Make That Point!" as is the custom at Albany Union High school. The North Salem cheer leaders recovered their poise and with much tact started yelling with us, "Make That Point!" I can honestly say that I have never seen such good sportsmanship displayed before at a high school game.
