Official Tells Onion Loss Loan Plans

Onion growers who have suffered substantial crop damages as a result of excessive rains and flood during October, are able to obtain emergency loans through the Farmers Home Administration, E. W. McVeigh, Marion County FHA supervisor, said this weekend.

McVeigh added that Kenneth W. Sawyer, state director, announced that counties included in the emergency loan authorization are Marion, Clackamas, Yamhill and Washington.

Initial loans may not be made under this authority after June 30, 1956, McVeigh explained.

Loans Explained
Loans may be made for the purchase of seed, fertilizer, insecticides, tractor fuel, repair of farm equipment, drainage, irrigation systems, land leveling and the clearing of debris necessary as a result of the flood disaster.

Payment of current taxes on real and personal property, water charges and current interest on real estate obligations where it appears that anticipated income will support such obligations and for other essential farm and open operation expenses are included.

Emergency loans will bear interest from the date of the loan advance at the rate of 3 per cent per year. Advances made for annual operation expenses will be scheduled for repayment when the principal income from the year's operations normally will be received.

Repayment Told
Advances for purposes other than annual operating expenses will be scheduled for repayment over the minimum period of time consistent with the anticipated ability of the borrower to repay. Ordinarily, such advances are not scheduled for repayment over a period in excess of five years from the date of the advance if secured by liens on chattel property, or 10 years from such date if secured by liens on real estate, McVeigh concluded.

The Farmers Home Administration office for Marion County is at 270 North Cottage, Salem.

from San Francisco to outline the Poultry and Egg National Board turkey program for the west coast. Schwartz has assisted a number of times in Oregon in the East More Turkey campaigns, while working with the surplus commodity division with USDA. He is, Bennion says, well acquainted with the turkey situation in Oregon.

Market Outlook
W. T. Geurtz, manager of the Oregon Turkey Growers, will review the turkey market outlook, and Bennion will give the results of a recent survey on production and prices as well as touch upon some trends in the turkey industry.

Concluding program number will be a panel discussion on demand, supply and prices, with Carlos Johnson, president of the Oregon Turkey Growers as panel leader. Soren Madsen, Junction City; George Durrant, Molalla; Lloyd Churches of the Menefree Turkey Ranch and Felix Wright of Silverton.

Adjournment has been set for 10 p.m., and Bennion says the events will get off promptly at 7:30.

Operation of the work-college plan is this: An Oregon branch bank or the head office of the United States National Bank interviews an outstanding senior in one of its area high schools and gives him a job. He works part-time the last three months of his senior year. The bank, after he graduates, notifies him of his selection for the program and he is then placed in a position with a regular monthly salary. He works in the bank for 15 months, saving a compulsory $100 from each paycheck for college expenses.

The next September he enters an Oregon college or university of his choice. (This fall 11 students chose the University of Oregon, four went to Oregon State college and one each to Linfield and Portland State.) Tuition for the two larger state schools is paid by the bank. The student's $1500 in savings cover room, board, and expenses. He completes fall, winter, spring, and summer terms in school and then returns to the bank to work a full year, saving $120 each month. From there he alternates a year at the bank and a year at college until ready to graduate in some field of business or economics.

Assuming that there are no interruptions and with approximately six years behind him since high school, he receives a diploma and joins the U. S. National staff with a guaranteed starting salary of $4,000 and a career ahead of him in banking.

Banking Firm Opens Posts For 11 Youths

EUGENE—Good positions in the banking profession are assured eleven young men now attending the University of Oregon.

These young men, here under the six-year-old United States National Bank work-college program, will have been out of high school only about six years when they step into positions in banking. Their qualifications will then amount to a college degree and three-years of banking experience.

Turkey Market Outlook Meet Planned in Salem on Friday

By LILLIE L. MADSEN Farm Editor, The Statesman

While the average American family will be eating turkey leftovers Friday the Oregon turkey grower will be starting anew with an outlook meeting for the next year's Thanksgiving feast.

The 15th annual outlook meeting for turkey growers, breeders and hatcherymen, including allied representatives, will be held in the Marion Hotel, Salem, Friday starting at 7:30 p.m. Originally the meeting was set for Mayflower Auditorium, but Noel L. Bennion, Corvallis, who is planning the meeting, says that indications are the Mayflower hall may not be large enough.

Highlighting the meeting, will be the report of Walter Schwedler, Portland, who attended the turkey advisory gathering called by Ezra Taft Benson in Washington, D. C., Thursday and Friday. The meeting in Washington was called because of a substantial increase for the coming year in the breeder hen. Schwedler will give the findings and recommendations of the committee at Friday's meeting.
