

Don't Look Now...

but... this is Signs of Spring Week on our calendar.

Birds... Away down in the field the other morning, we saw a great hoard of quail. About 18 were in one crowd, 20 in another, and with the usual lookout stationed on the fence to warn of any approaching strangers. But along the brick wall came a couple, strolling a long practically holding hands, and oblivious to danger. They took a turn around the yard, then returned and mingled with the crowd.

People... It's been a long, hard, and lonesome winter without any parked cars in dark nooks to brighten my road home, but this last week we noted a number along the route, which of course indicates unfailingly, that spring is just around the corner and love's about to bloom.

Animal... Awakened by the oddest noise the other night, we lay and listened, trying, but unable to recognize it. We knew it was a mouse, but doing what? Next morning upon investigating we found that the little thing was pulling out the ribbon in our typewriter in the desk drawer. The ribbon was crumpled up into a cozy nest inside the keyboard. The noise was the unwinding of the spools and mousey was indulging in a rodent's version of making little pink and blue things.

Vegetable... Standing out in contrast to a dead and dreary garden are the daring daffodils, which are almost ready to burst into bloom, the brave Christmas rose, and even a sturdy primrose or two out-smarting the weather by blooming with flowers snuggled down in the leaves.

Mineral... For once, fashion hit the nail on the head when it decreed all those attractive raincoats that look like something fancy but are really practical coverings for March's whipping winds and rains.

And anyway... Kids like the snow, skaters the ice, ducks the floods but nobody wants wind—not even sailors anymore...
