

By DON HARGER

This coming Monday evening, March 26, waterfowlers of the Salem area will be given a rare treat by the Sprig Chapter of the Oregon Duck Hunters Association when that group has its regular monthly meeting at the Salem Gun Club. The "rare treat" will be the showing of the color film, "ON THE WING," from the extensive film library of Field & Stream magazine. The film, reputed to be one of the best goose shooting films ever taken, covers an entire goose hunt from start to finish. Viewers will see the setting out of the decoys, calling, shooting and retrieving. The retrieving is done by two field trial champion Chesapeake retrievers who show remarkable work in bringing in geese.

The Sprig Chapter cordially invites all interested persons to be guests for the film showing. Les Zumwalt, regional supervisor for the Oregon Game Commission is scheduled to talk on the same program and will cover the local migratory waterfowl problems and the progress of developing new refuges and shooting grounds. It looks like a bang-up evening with the added attraction of refreshments to wind up the evening. Starting time is 8 p.m.

Steelhead Fishing Again at Slow Pace

Steelhead fishing has slowed down quite some and no little the past few days with plenty of snow putting the chill on things, including the fish. The lower Sandy has produced a few bright fish but in general the steelhead fishing has been poor. A few spring Chinook have been taken from the mouth of the Clackamas where there is a bit of clear water but the number of fish taken in ratio to the number of anglers has been low.

Only bright spot on the angling picture is the ocean fishing. Anglers are enjoying surf fishing and jetty-jumping for ling cod, perch and rock bass. A few flounders are also being taken in the bays at Nestucca, Siletz, and Yaquina. Best bet for perch is the surf of Pacific City. Light surf tackle makes the perch fishing quite a sport. Then there is the anticipation which goes along with it. One never knows when some stray fish from the deep may come along and swim off with your outfit.

We recall a surf fishing trip a few years ago in California when our ever-loving fishin' wife went along with us to show us how to catch strippers. A stranger whom we had not had the pleasure of seeing before was on hand when we arrived at our chosen spot. He had a fire burning briskly to thwart the chill of a thick heavy fog blanket which spread in from the Pacific. He was standing, back to the fire, sipping coffee when we arrived.

We nodded and spoke good-mornings, and asked what he had had. He answered that he had not had a strike and supposed it was due to a brand new surf casting outfit. We noted the "new" outfit propped upright in the wet sand about 50 feet away. As we watched, the rod tip gave a violent dip and then snapped straight. The stranger made a start and then paused. He never should have paused. The rod dipped again and then fairly flew toward the pounding surf. He quickened his pace but never did get going as fast as his new outfit was travelling. It finally slid off through a cresting breaker and we never saw it again.

That angler was a true surf fisherman. All he had left to say was, "I wonder what it was?" We could have thought of several other things to go along with his effort, but it might have spoiled his day.

Mr. Prange Offers a Few Names

Talking with Conrad "Comes the Dawn" Prange very often brings out some sensible fish chatter. Take for example the latest offering of our Complain Angler. In response to a recent column of ours lamenting the fact that Santiam had no names for its rifles and runs, Conrad suggested that he could name several of the spots he fished and suggested a few names such as (1) The Democrat Rifle. It hasn't produced a thing in four years. (2) The Rocking Chair Rifle. Conrad always slips and sits down on this one. (3) The Thief's Drift. Some other angler always steals his spot on this one. He has some other offerings also, but strict censorship prevents us from listing them.

Conrad suggested too, that it was high time we got in and named our own pools and rifles before some upper crust angler from back east comes along and hangs such names as Wall Street Pool, White House Hole, or maybe even the Three Million Dollar Rifle. The latter would be silly, indeed, as very few of us have a cent over two million. We'd feel a bit out of place fishing such a rifle. Especially with bait.

Fishing Report:

NORTHWEST
Salt water fishing has been good for ling cod, rock bass, and perch in the Barview, Pacific City, Netarts, and Sand Lake areas. A few flounder have also been taken. Black bass have begun to strike at Lake Lytle. Bright steelhead have been taken in fair numbers on the lower Sandy. Fishing has been slow on Clackamas river and Eagle creek. Spring chinook angling is improving on the Willamette and is expected to be fair (providing the water continues to clear).

NORTHEAST
All streams in the John Day area are running. The North Fork produces last week with many steelhead taken on a variety of lures and baits. The Grande Ronde and Willowa rivers are murky. Fishing is slow. Good catches of steelhead have been made on Pine creek and the Powder river on lures and shrimp. Water is high and muddy on the Umatilla and Walla Walla rivers.

Dons Scared, But Gain Win

Iowa Dumps Temple In NCAA Semifinals

scored the 6-10 Frisco ace by seven points, 24-17. SMU Thrills Crowd
SMU gave the crowd a bit of a thrill by moving to a 7-2 lead at the outset. But Farmer and Hal Perry began hitting for the Dons, who moved ahead for keeps at 10-9 and with the game six minutes old were in front, 16-9.

After Krebs got his third basket for SMU, the Dons flashed in five straight baskets in little more than three minutes to surge to a 28-11 margin.

Russell Not At Best
EVANSTON, Ill. — "We figure any club can beat us—it's up to Iowa to try and knock us off," said San Francisco Coach Phil Woodpert.

"Our whole ball club has lots of respect for Iowa. It's a good 'boards' team."
Russell Not At Best
"I would say that Thursday night's game wasn't Bill Russell's best for sure, but you can't be over-critical when you win by 18 points," Woodpert continued. "We'll have to be better to beat Iowa. We're not a superman ball club, just a good one. And we have to expect to have lapses. But we keep winning."

E. O. (Doc) Hayes, SMU coach, said that there was no question about who he would pick to win the title Friday night:

"It's San Francisco—I think they could beat the Russians," he chuckled. "There was a certain tension about our kids that was a factor in us not being able to do as good a job as we've done in the past. We didn't seem sure of ourselves. After all, for two years our kids have been reading about how good San Francisco is."

Probers Eye Portland Fight

ord Book lists a third-round knockout for Kabut over a Jack Hughes on June 28, 1946, at Portland. Kabut said he recalled the Pinky Hughes fight well.

"I hit him with an overhand right and his eye puffed way up," he said. After adding that as far as he knew there was nothing wrong with the way the match ended, Kabut declared, "If I had knowledge of any plans for Hughes to get out early I wouldn't have taken the match."

The hefty matchmaker was not present at Thursday's portion of the hearing and said his physician had advised against it. He had denied "fixed fight" accusations during earlier testimony and is scheduled to return to the stand before the hearing ends.

Borcher Talks Of Resigning

my mind after seeing other people in Eugene."

Borcher came to Oregon in 1952 following a number of successful years at Marshfield High School in Coos Bay. His Oregon teams have a conference won-lost record of 44-46 and an overall record of 69-68. In the Northern Division his teams finished second three times and third once. This season, the first with a full nine-team conference schedule, Oregon wound up in a sixth-place tie with Oregon State.

Borcher's critics admit his coaching ability but feel he has failed to attract basketball talent comparable to the school's athletic strength in other sports.

There was speculation that Al Negretti, University of Portland coach, was a possible replacement for Borcher.

Seafair Race Due for Title

SEATTLE — The $25,000 Seafair Trophy Race here next August has been designated the 1956 national championship for unlimited speedboats, Jerry Bryant said Thursday.

Bryant, president of the sponsoring Greater Seattle, Inc., said he had been advised of the action by Frank Foulke of Essex, Md., chairman of the Inboard Racing Commission.

The Trophy race was set up to replace the Gold Cup race, held here since 1951 but lost to the city last summer when the cup was won by a Detroit boat—Joe Schoenith's Gale V.
