Steel's like that big, healthy, growing boy of yours

Most Americans, busy with their own pursuits, think of steel as a great sprawling industry — big, strong, never tiring, never stopping. Steel is all that.

But it's more. In many ways this big industry is like that strapping son of yours or those big lads next door or down the block.

Both need food. For the boy his three squares a day, with seconds. For the steel industry millions of tons of iron ore, coal, limestone and scrap.

Both need equipment. That growing boy can wear out more shoes! And outgrow more suits! The steel companies—growing, too—are wearing out furnaces and outgrowing mills all the time.

Both need to develop. More schooling and his first job will develop the boy. The steel companies must be constantly developing new methods, processes add techniques to speed up and simplify production of more and more steel.

Since World War II the companies built up their steelmaking capacity from 92 million tons a year to 128 million tons — a 40 per cent increase. And present expansion plans call for 15 million tons additional capacity in just 3 years.

Both need financing. For the boy, seems like it's ten to fifteen dollars every few months just for shoes. For the steel companies it's ten to fifteen million dollars for each blast furnace. Replacement of equipment uses up a large part of company profits because allowable depreciation is far from adequate to meet today's costs.

Expansion costs this year alone will run over a billion dollars.

And the steel companies can get the money they need from two sources only: (1) directly from their earnings, and (2) from the savings of investors who have confidence in the ability of the companies to earn profits attractive to such investors.

Yes, they're a lot alike — the growing boy and the expanding steel companies. Encouragement, understanding and support can speed them both to their destiny. And theirs is the destiny of all of us.

America and Steel Must Grow Together.
