Larmer Family Long Active in Business Here

The Daniel Larmer family has had business interests in Salem since 1910 and its first big warehouse operation dates back to 1927, it was recalled Tuesday when Mrs. Mary Larmer announced plans to build a $100,000 cannery warehouse in South Salem.

The late Daniel Larmer came to Salem as a youngster, attending school in West Salem. Later he served as street car conductor on the Salem streets, saving money to buy his first one-team dray business in 1910. His first barns were on South Liberty with the first Larmer office at 169 S. Liberty St.

Eight years later, the Larmer opened their first storage service, on Front and D Streets, storing grain in their garage.

The definite need for more storage space was felt and they enlarged in the location where the Terminal Ice Company now is situated. It was in 1927, that they erected their first large building, facing North Liberty and Broadway, with hops the principal material stored. This first building was burned in 1930, after which Mr. Larmer considered going into something else, but the hop farmers persuaded him to rebuild, and a year and a half later he started his new storage plant, finishing as money was available.

Two years ago Mr. Larmer died, leaving five warehouses and better than 35 pieces of hauling equipment. Not retiring "Friends thought I should sell out and retire," Mrs. Larmer said Tuesday. "But I knew that wasn't what Mr. Larmer would want. We built the business together. He'd want me to keep it in the family. Although I'm 65, I don't feel like retiring."

So instead of breaking up the business her husband had built up since he bought his first team of horses in Salem 45 years ago, Mrs. Larmer decided to "keep it in the family" and expand. She incorporated, and became president of the company and in this deals are occupied by Mrs. Larmer and the Jensens. Behind the desks is a modern coffee-break room, where Mrs. Larmer settles many of her big deals over a cup of coffee.

Just to make it completely modern, a new, small office was built this year, in the garden behind the huge storage buildings and bookkeeping offices of the company and in this deals are occupied by Mrs. Larmer and the Jensens. Behind the desks is a modern coffee-break room, where Mrs. Larmer settles many of her big deals over a cup of coffee.

Home owners planning to plant a lawn may attend a clinic Thursday at 8 p.m. in Room #2 of Marion County Courthouse.

Under the direction of Oris Rudd, Marion County extension agent, this first public session of the clinic will feature a discussion on soil and seedbed preparation prior to planting the lawn.

Planned for consecutive Thursday evenings, after April 19, are discussions on "Lawn Grass Varieties and Seeding," April 26, "Renovating Poor Lawns," May 3, and "Maintaining the Lawn," including clipping, fertilizing, and weed control, May 10.

Lawn Planting Discussion Due at Meet

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Howell-Edwards Chapel for Elmira Baker, 95, who died Monday at a Woodburn nursing home.

Dignity Takes Holiday as WU Faculty Follies Take Over Campus

Dignity took a holiday Tuesday with presentation of the Faculty Follies of 1956 on the Willamette University campus. Among features of the satirical rendition of campus life was a Maypole dance in which faculty members made up in laughs what they lacked in execution. From left to right: Dr. Marmer Morange, Dr. and Mrs. Jean Williams.

WU's Faculty Follies Take Satiric Poke at Courtship

Dignity was thrown to the winds, the traditions of the campus were broken, and the faculty had a great time when they presented their W. U. Faculty Follies of 1956 on the Willamette campus Tuesday.

Organized by Dr. Paul Trueblood after having been challenged by the students to put on a "decent" convention, the faculty members attired themselves in costume and showed the students their stuff in a satire on courtship on the campus from the Gay Nineties to the Rock 'n Roll Fifties.

Dr. Cecil Monk and his "Daisy," Dr. Gale Currey, showed the answer to the "ten foot rule" of the 1900's, when men and women had to walk ten feet apart, while a barbershop quartet composed of Dr. George Martin, Charles Paeth, Dean Melvin Geist, and Harold Jory, rendered a sweet, if slightly off-key, version of "Daisy of W. U."

Queen of the May
Queen of the May, Mrs. Clorinda Topping, emerged with a train of lace curtains to be crowned by Dr. Daniel Schukle. Her two attendants, including lilytops, were Mrs. Margaret Rinalda and Miss Lois Latimer. The living May Pole, around which the students did their dance, was Dean Robert Gregg, clad in bathrobe, high hat, and ivy vines.

The "Roaring '20s" brought to the stage two flapper kids, Dr. Gale Currey and Dr. Paul Trueblood, who sang and danced "If You Knew Susie," and rendered a little Charleston dance.

Cords, letterman's jacket, Bermudas, and a frosh Rook kid personified what romance meant to the modern W. U. couple, heading out for Bush's Pasture. Jerry Whipple and Julie Mellor were ready for love, but had to wait for an asbestos curtain, aptly provided by stagehands Buzz Yokom and Dave Lewis.

Shades of Bridey Murphy
Shades of Bridey Murphy! Dr. Charles Dertwick, professor of psychology, did a little hypnosis—and discovered his patient was Jason Lee's wife, who admitted that the rules and regulations in her time weren't like Dr. Gatzke had written in his book, "Chronicles of Willamette," at which time the latter raced to the stage to defend his bookright.

Musical inspirations were given by the faculty combo, composed of Mr. Maurice Brennan, Prof. Ralph Dobbs, Prof. James Douglas and Allen Gove. Drama director, Robert Putnam, narrated the script, which poked fun at both the students and the faculty.

The grand finale brought the entire cast to the footlights to join with the students in singing some of the old W. U. songs that have recently become popular again.

Accommodations in city jail were provided the eight and they later were sent on their respective ways with suspended five-day sentences.

Carl Morrison Farm Sold for $29,500 Sum

The Carl Morrison farm on the South Pacific highway near Salem has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Stevely, 1460 Marshall Dr., Salem, it was announced Tuesday.

Morrison, who now lives at Kenville, Ore., sold the property for $29,500. Included are 66 acres of land and a three-bedroom house.

Morrison was represented in the deal by Jim Ramsey of Ramsey Real Estate. Representing the buyer was W. H. Stevely of State Finance Co., the purchaser's father.

W. G. Stevely, who is affiliated with the D. A. White & Sons Seed Company of Salem, plans to plant the land to red creeping fescue.

Court Asks Boone Road Safety Steps

Marion County Court members Tuesday recommended that additional safety measures be taken at the intersection of Boone Road and the Southern Pacific's main line, just south of Salem.

The decision followed a report by County Engineer John Anderson describing conditions at the crossing and suggesting that improved signal devices be installed.

Court members also heard complaints from two residents of the area concerning certain visual hazards near the crossing.

A request will be made that the Public Utilities Commissioner investigate the situation and suggest methods for providing increased security, court members said.

The crossing has been the site of five deaths in four accidents during the past three years. Last weekend witnessed the most recent fatalities, when a Staysan and a Nysa woman were killed in a car-freight train collision.

Logger Dies in Crash Near Cave Junction

GRANTS PASS UP — An automobile crashed on a curve south of Cave Junction Tuesday morning and killed the driver, Bill Jeff Ewert, 32, a logger from O'Brien.

A passenger, Annis Dixon of Kerby, suffered possible rib fractures.

Red Hat Day Committee Re-Appointed

The sportsmanship program of the Governor's Red Hat Day Committee was endorsed and continued by Gov. Elmo Smith Tuesday when he re-appointed all members of last year's committee and added two new members.

The Governor's Red Hat Day Committee was launched last year on recommendation of the Isaac Walton League.

Gov. Smith said the committee has made a successful start in a vaunting objectives of the program which are to improve conduct in the part of those who use the outdoors, especially hunters and fishermen, and better understanding and cooperation between landowners and recreationists.

Present members of the committee reappointed are L. C. Burford, Portland, past president Oregon division Isaac Walton League representing sportsmen; John A. M. O'Cher, Winchester, Oregon Wildlife Association, representing sportsmen; Ben Bulsman, Portland, editor Oregon Game Bulletin, representing agriculturists; Walter A. Holt, Portland, manager Pacific International Livestock Exposition, representing livestock industry; and Bert Thomas, Portland, Valdez Lumber Company, representing the timber industry.

New members of the committee are William Benz, Portland, sailor's union of the Pacific, representing labor; and Gerald W. Detering, Harrisburg, president of the Oregon Farm Bureau Federation, representing agriculture.

The Red Hat Day program originally was directed primarily at hunters but the program has been expanded now to include sportsmanship for all outdoor recreationists for property and rights of others, fire prevention and high ethical standards afield. Data for Red Hat Day will be announced later by the committee. It probably will be in September preceding opening of the deer season.

Standard Oil Wins County Drilling Right

Permitting to perform test drilling as part of geological investigation of the Marion County area was granted Tuesday by county court members to Standard Oil Co. of California.

Drilling will take place along various county roads with depths expected to exceed 85 feet.

A four-inch auger drill will be used to obtain samples for analysis at the firm's laboratories. The company has agreed to fill all holes and to assume complete responsibility where damage occurs.
