George Fox Choir Plans Concert Here

Highland Avenue Friends Church will be host to Quaker meetings in the greater Salem area when the George Fox College a cappella choir is presented Sunday at 3:30 p.m.

Prog. Ross Stover, graduate of Westminster College, will direct the George Fox College 22-voice choir to which the public is invited.

The formal program is divided into five sections. The presentation opens with several typical examples of early sacred choral music including the most beautiful works of the masters of the area: Byrd, Hasler, Bach and Handel.

The second group is from the Romantic era ranging from a meditative motet by Johannes Brahms: "Create in Me" to a rousing chorus by Edward Grieg "God's Son Has Made Me Free."

The third group is Russian music including the popular recent translation of "How Great Thou Art." The fourth section contains a group of notable anthems of the Easter season by contemporary composers, and the fifth section is a presentation of the lighter side composed of Negro spirituals.

The concert will close with the traditional choral benediction by Peter C. Lutkin.
