From Roberts' Decorating Studio

A breakfast conversation several days ago went like this: "Oh, look at those robins rebuilding last year's old nest!"

"Robins only build new ones."

"Those two aren't. See them pulling out wisps of grass and weathered fuzz?"

Today we see them bringing bits of grass and twigs and carefully working them into the old nest. Soon it will be finished and they will have a bird haven where all their dreams can be realized. We can hardly imitate them, so we look about us with new interest. That old chair has to go! Even last year it looked too worn near the new davenport. Can just see the turquoise wing chair, which we show near a gold sectional in our show room, adding a bright new note in the living room. And, oh, you should see the beautiful wide seated French chair upholstered in a quilted document print which we unpacked yesterday. Its back is outlined with a ruffled inset to give it unusual charm. How nice to replace an old, worn grouping of furniture with such a chair and perhaps a companion commode or table with one of the larger lamps we show now. Every day sees the arrival of distinctive new furnishings which inspired our buyer to order while at the market this year. These carefully selected chairs, sofas, desks and accessories can add real drama to an otherwise tired-looking room. Let us use them to re-ferish our old nest.

'Bye till later,

EM
