

NWC Records To Face Test

Conference Cinder Session Saturday

Whitman's current team has best mark of the spring, a 22.3.

220-low hurdles: Benson's mark of 24.2, set last year, could be topped by three athletes Saturday. Benson himself (23.8), Klicker of Whitman (24.2) and Clarence Duke of L-C (24.4).

Two-mile run: Record of 10:01.3 by McKenzie of Whitman in 1932 appears to be quite safe. L-C's Bob Mitchell has a 10:05.1 this season.

High jump: Don Adams of Pacific (5'2") and Howard Glen of Linfield (5'11") should flatten the mark of 6' 3/4" set by Al Tarpenning of Linfield in 1953.

Pole vault: Willamette's Larry Thompson has done 12 feet, but the record is 12' 11 3/4" by Bill Klise of Whitman in 1954.

Broad jump: The record of 23' 5" by Morrie Robinette of Whitman in 1953 will be faced by Pacific's Don Adams (22' 11").

Shot put: Jim Hitcham's 46' 5" for Willamette in 1954 looms safe, although John Martin of the Pioneers and Glen of Linfield are close, at 45' 11 3/4".

Javelin: L-C's Loren Michelson holds the record of 141' 8 3/4", and has done 151' 9 3/4" this year.

Javelin: Willamette's Bob Hall did 203' 4 3/4" in 1951 and no one is even close to that mark this spring.

Relay: Both Whitman and Lewis & Clark have done the two-lapper in 3:28 this season, but the mark is a stiff 3:25.2 by Whitman's 1954 unit.

Saturday's meet will get under way with field events at 1 p.m., and track events at 1:30.

What U.S. Athletes Will Wear

PHILADELPHIA—John B. Kelly Jr. (left), of Philadelphia, the U.S. Canadian and Pan American single sculls champion, and Thomas W. Courtney of Livingston, N. J., American 800-meter record holder, display the official uniforms of the United States Olympic Team. Kelly wears the parade uniform and Courtney wears the travel gear. Uniforms include matching caps, shoes, socks, shirts and ties. Jackies and hats bear the red, white, blue and gold U.S. Olympic emblem. Kelly is the brother of Grace Kelly.

Football Doesn't Foot All of Athletes' Bills In Pacific Coast Loop

By JACK HEWINS

SEATTLE—Football's big gates do not foot the entire bill for the care and maintenance of athletes in the Pacific Coast Conference.

College alumni and boosters take the zippers off their wallets to provide more than a third of the $776,000 the nine member schools budget for the athletic "payroll."

Figures provided by the athletic departments of the conference members reveal contributions of approximately $285,000 a year. Nearly all of it goes to grants-in-aid—the conference name for payments of tuition fees.

Every penny of this quarter-million is channeled through the schools and all the $776,000 is paid out in accordance with conference rules.

Entirely Different

Something entirely different is the so-called off-campus "slush fund" such as the one which brought the University of Washington a two-year probation and loss of an estimated $32,000 in future Rose Bowl shares. Alumni and boosters contribute to these, too, but under-the-table payments to athletes are a matter of private bookkeeping and the colleges disclaim knowledge of such goings-on.

The Washington probation came out of an emergency session earlier this month. The regular spring meeting of the conference opens Friday in Victoria, B. C., and more disciplinary action is expected. It is known that Commissioner Victor O. Schmidt has conducted a conference-wide investigation and is ready to report his findings.

Member Schools

The member schools are permitted to pay grants-in-aid and furnish campus jobs with salaries up to $75 a month—a sum due to be raised to $100. Each college is limited to 60 grants-in-aid from its own funds but can offer more by using contributed money. Most try to finance this entire operation with contributions.

One hundred to 135 athletes are assisted financially at each school, most of them on football "rides."

As an example, one school has 60 football players on its assistance rolls, 25 basketball players, 10 track men, 15 baseball players and 10 in other sports.

Southern California reported the biggest total, a budget of $100,000 to $130,000 annually. High tuition costs help push up the USC total. Stanford tops them all in grants-in-aid, spending $83,000 on tuition.

SPORTSMAN'S DIGEST TRIAL FLY LINES

BALANCING A FLY ROD AND LINE DOESN'T MEAN BALANCING THEM ON SCALES. IT MEANS USING THE RIGHT WEIGHT (SIZE) LINE WITH A PARTICULAR ROD TO BRING ITS POWER INTO PLAY. RODS VARY AS TO THEIR USERS, SO EACH ANGLER MUST FIND A LINE TO SUIT HIS ROD. THIS IS DONE BY TRYING DIFFERENT-SIZED LINES AND CASTING UPON WATER OR A LAWN TO AVOID LINE DAMAGE.

STores don't normally lend lines for a trial and the average angler can rarely buy several lines to find a suitable one, so the best way to experiment is to borrow friends' lines. WORN OUT LINES WILL DO FOR TRIAL.

Bowling League Led By Salem Auto Parts

Capitol Commercial Bowling League No. 1 concluded the season Monday night at Capitol Lanes with a rolloff match between Salem Auto Parts, the first half winners, and Knights of Columbus. The first game was won by Salem Auto with a lead of 172 pins and, though the Knights of Columbus came back to win the next two games 203 to 178 and 905 to 807, they could not wipe out the pinfall lead which decides this type of match and were defeated.

Totals were an all time low for both teams, with Wes Blewett's 553 for the winners being the only seri' enover 500. "Jeep" Eppings' 486 was high effort for the Knights.

The wind-up again proved that the Knights of Columbus were in 11th place when the first half concluded, with 18 points won out of a possible 60. In the second half, the same team romped into the first place spot sparked by Eppings' steady improving legging and George Stupfel's average picking up from a starting 133 to 147 at season end.

Salem Steel and Supply had high team series for the league with 3,053. Nicholson's Insurance shot the high team game at 1,137. Keith M. Hayes, bowling for Orval's Used Cars, was the high average man for the league with a 185. His average never dropped below 183 and he finished up with 26 games over 200 and 6-series over 600, taking the high series of 637 for the league season.

He was tied for high game honors with Don Poulin of Lawless Massons who both shot a 256 game.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska—The Seattle Rainiers of the Pacific Coast League will play an exhibition baseball game in Anchorage July 2. Les Larsen of Seattle said Wednesday. He is a member of the team's board of directors.

The League schedule shows open dates for Seattle July 2 and 3. The Rainiers are due back home July 4 for a doubleheader against the Vancouver Mounties. Plans call for 12 to 13 players to fly to Anchorage the morning of July 2 and return that night after the game. The team's opponent has not yet been named.
