

Subversive Control Board Member Bitter

DENVER (AP) — Harry P. Cain, bitterly critical of the Eisenhower administration security program, said Thursday night he believes he is on the way out from his government job.

Cain, whose term on the Subversives Activities Control Board expires in August, said: "My usefulness to the President, who appointed me to my present post some years ago, is, I believe, rapidly drawing to a close."

And, in what sounded even more like a burn-the-bridges farewell, Cain picked up the derisive Democratic nickname of "Numbers Game" for Republican claims to ridding the government of security risks.

Cain said President Eisenhower is "The Champ" to the American people. But, Cain suggested, Eisenhower should be wary of the security number claims, since "any champion can be made to look like a chump if he leaves himself open for a sucker punch."

Cain made his remarks in a speech for the Colorado branch of the American Civil Liberties Union, meeting at Denver University.

Speaks Convictions

He said that from time to time a man must speak his convictions, and:

"I am so moved to speak out tonight, not for the first time but perhaps, in my present capacity, for the last time."

Cain, 50 years old, was a Republican member of the U.S. Senate from Washington from 1947 until 1953. As a senator he was a vehement battler against what he denounced as leftism. When he was defeated for re-election in 1952 he was named to the $15,000-a-year subversive board post and little was heard from him for about a year and a half.

Attacks Increase

Then in January 1955 he began a series of attacks, increasing in intensity, against the handling of the program that was set up to keep security risks out of the government.

Thursday night, as he had in a New York speech May 5, Cain charged that presidential advisers are keeping Eisenhower uninformed or misinformed on what Cain called the great damage done to individuals in the workings of the security system.

Specifically, he charged that the system is so unconcerned with individual rights and civil liberties that it lets accusations dangle for months before disposing of them by firings or clearances.

'Nobody Cares Much'

He said many innocent people are thus terminated needlessly, and nobody seems to care very much. But, Cain said:

"Our peacetime internal security administration would be ineffective and self-defeating in wartime. Citizens by the thousands would simply disappear."

One wartime difference, he added, would be the use of concentration centers for those suspected or charged with being security risks.

'Numbers' Yardstick

On the "numbers game" question, Cain said:

"In this month's issue of the official publication of the party to which I belong, security risk numbers are offered as being a reliable standard or yardstick for an achievement since 1953 . . . Party members like myself are encouraged to commit the numbers to heart and then employ them on the street corners, in speeches, in debates on radio and TV and over the backyard fence."

9,700 Parks Gone

The numbers relate that 3,700 security risks have been separated from the government and that 6,000 additional employees have resigned.

Cain said many of the 9,700 did not deserve the government's confidence or employment, but many others were only vaguely charged and were not provided with a reasonable chance to defend themselves.

'Suffer for Months'

These others, he said, were "left to suffer for agonizing months before being told whether they were found to be guilty or innocent."

"These numbers should be marked POISON and employed with the greatest care. Anyone who employs the numbers without stating that the numbers are subject to a large margin of error is totally without knowledge or ought to have his head examined."

'Private Citizen'

Here again, Cain said "I shall probably be just another private citizen several months from now."

But, he said he thought he had "more knowledge about the numbers game than do most persons" and will persist in declaring that the bare number 9,700 "is the most erroneous, dangerous and misleading government statistic ever made public."

Cain has previously told of being hawled out by presidential aide Sherman Adams for his attacks on the security program. His prepared text Thursday night did not mention Adams — only Brownell. He said:

Discusses Replacement

"Someone who has a facility for getting through to those advisers and through them to the President can be appointed to take my place in August."

"Perhaps such a person can make the unpleasant facts of life more digestible to those in higher authority. I pray that some such talented but aggressive and more diplomatic person will replace me."
