High Fashion Gets in the Swim

LIKE MOTHER, LIKE DAUGHTER... This family twosome is ready to get in the swim in matching gingham plaid suits, shirred to fit, with halter strap that can be removed. MERMAID, 1956... Her boy style swim suit is made of pin-dot elasticized faille. THEY CAN SWIM, TOO... These bathing beauties are wearing the last word in swim suits, made of acetate elasticized satin.

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

MODERN MERMAIDS get the breaks this summer. They can look glamorous as all get-out, in swim suits that take to the water with the greatest of ease, dry in a jiffy while they lie on the beach afterward, and keep their clear, bright colors all through the season.

All this again can be credited to chemistry, which has provided new finishes, new processes and new fibers to brighten the life of the bathing beauty.

Time was when beach belles were divided into two classes—those who sat on the beach and looked pretty, and those who took their swimming seriously, and looked awful, in practical tank suits. All this now is changed. The most fabulous bathing suits on the beach are designed for honest-to-goodness swimming, and look just as glamorous coming out of the water as going in.

The newest silhouettes of high fashion are incorporated in the sun-and-shir lineups this year, including the long-torso look, skillfully placed shirring around the hips, the sheath look and the lady-like look.

You'll see few startling bare suits this year. The emphasis rather is on figure-flattering lines, inside construction to keep the figure under control and fabrics that take sun and salt-water without losing their fresh new look.

This year girls who like to swim can take the plunge with no qualms. All they have to do is read the fabric labels when they go shopping for bathing suits.

Leaders for Day Camp Selected

Registration for Girl Scout Day Camp, to be held at Camp Crestwood June 11-15, are now being received by Day Camp Chairman Mrs. Louise Haines.

The camp will be under the direction of Mrs. Joan E. Hamlin, who was director last year. Programs are included for both Brownies and Intermediates and will include hiking, camp cooking, exploring woods, fields and creek bank, playing games, singing, and the use of natural materials in crafts.

Bus transportation will leave the First Presbyterian Church at 9 a.m. each camping day and return at 4 p.m. A nurse will be in charge of health and safety.

Each unit of 12 campers will be guided in its activities by at least two selected and trained leaders. Leaders for the 1956 session include: Mrs. Everett Woods, Mrs. Gilbert Anderson, Mrs. Charles Mills, Mrs. Harvey Ronne, Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mrs. Edward Johnson, Mrs. Lillian Holcomb, Mrs. Wray Hutton, Mrs. John Asquith, Mrs. Theodore Rhoades, Mrs. Ted Gordon, Mrs. Elma Feddern, and Mrs. Clifford Ford. These adult leaders will be assisted by program aides from Senior Scout Troop 30.

The number who can attend camp is limited by the site facilities and adult staff. At the present time there are approximately 25 camper vacancies left. Troops are urged to get their registration cards mailed to Mrs. Haines, 1595 N. 17th, Salem, before June 1.

Modern Etiquette

By ROBERTA LEE

Q If a man is taking post-graduate work for the purpose of adding several college degrees, would it be proper for him to mail announcements to his friends after each degree is received?

A He could hardly in good taste mail out a series of such announcements. It would be much better for him to send out one card at the end, announcing his completed work.

Q Are the wives of speakers supposed to be seated at the speakers' table at a banquet, even though they have no active part in the program?

A If there is room for the wives at the table, yes. Otherwise, it is not improper to seat elsewhere.
