administration action presumably was taken to head off enactment of the bill.

Enemy of the People

Our state department has obtained and made public what is said to be excerpts from the speech of Khrushchev before the Communist Congress last February in which he made his now celebrated denunciation of Stalin.

Here are some excerpts from the excerpts: Khrushchev said the central committee "after Stalin's death" decided to make "impermissible" any plan to transform one person "into a superman possessing supernatural characteristics akin to those of a god."

Khrushchev also traced the tactics of Stalin who acted not through persuasion, "but by imposing his concepts and demanding absolute submission to his opinion."

What is going to be the effect of this indictment and confession throughout the world. Non-Communists will hail it as proof of the charges they made long ago.

What the new hierarchy has done has been to open the door to the testing of truth by men of independent mind. Now there is no All-Highest in the Communist biography; deviation thus is bound to creep in.

Separate Fisheries Bureau

Rep. Walter Norblad has informed the Astorian Budget that a bureau of commercial fisheries will be set up in the department of the interior very soon. It will be divorced from the present fish and wildlife service and be a unit of the department directly under the secretary.

State Power Upheld

A Supreme Court decision Monday upheld state authority for banning mass picketing, use of force and threats of violence by strikers. The court divided six to three on the question.

Justice Reed pointed out that it is a primary responsibility of the state to prevent violence and damage to property. To quote: "The states are the natural guardians of the public against violence."

That seems like good common sense. Such an interpretation of the law puts no ban on peaceful picketing or on the right to strike. It preserves authority in the state to maintain local order.

In the same batch of decisions was one denying a review of the judgment given Hawaiian Pineapple Co. against two longshore unions for their destruction of property at the docks of the Port of The Dalles in 1949.

English Language in India

When the constitution of India was proclaimed in 1950 it contained a provision for replacing English as the national language with Hindi by 1965. As time has gone on, however, sentiment has developed for retaining English. It is the prevailing language in business, education, politics.

Pointed Queries Await Study of Atom

WASHINGTON (AP)—Fred A. Seaton, nominated as Secretary of the Interior, faces some friendly but pointed questioning when he appears before the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee on Tuesday.

Idaho, favored private development of the Hells Canyon section of Snake River, and is sharply critical of Jordan's conduct of U.S. relations with Canada.

While the diplomats are discussing relations between Canada and the United States with special reference to the Columbia, they may take a look at another spot of disagreement. It will be recalled that the Aluminum Co. of America sought Canadian approval of a project to reverse the flow of the upper Yukon, divert its water into U.S. territory near Skagway where a huge aluminum reduction plant would be built.

Another matter on which Sen. Murray and O'Mahoney may want to question ex-Sen. Seaton concerns tidelands. In a sense, the issue is much all through the pipelines since the Republican controlled 83rd congress passed legislation in 1953, which President Eisenhower signed, giving the states title to minerals in the strips between their coasts and historic seaward boundaries.

Heavy Demands
Stalin jeopardized the Soviet alliance with Communist China by demanding too much in return for Russian aid. He faced Mao Tse-tung, Red China's chief, with a series of economic demands smacking of colonialism and insisted that Stalin must have the final word on the development of Communism in China.

Pointed Queries Await Study of Atom Effects on Man Nearly Ready

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Academy of Sciences said Monday it will make public a week from Wednesday the initial findings of a study of the effects of atomic radiations on man and his environment.

There are wide differences of opinion among scientists as to the danger, particularly as future generations may be affected. Announcement of the forthcoming report was made by the academy's president, Detlev W. Bronk, who also heads the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, New York City.

Other points in Seaton's voting record while in the senate may draw queries. The newly appointed secretary was one of only eight Republican senators who voted against passage of the McCarran-Walter Immigration veto. He also voted against cuts in the air force budget, for cuts in federal highway aid.

Question: Does he still believe, as he did in 1952, that "Alaska is as deserving of statehood, and as ready for statehood, and as greatly in need of statehood to come into her own, as were any of the present states when it was their turn before the bar of the Senate ...?"

In 1952, then chairman of the interior committee, Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) rose to compliment Seaton on his "splendid address ... (which) should convince any open mind that statehood should be granted."

Another matter on which Sen. Murray and O'Mahoney may want to question ex-Sen. Seaton concerns tidelands. In a sense, the issue is much all through the pipelines since the Republican controlled 83rd congress passed legislation in 1953, which President Eisenhower signed, giving the states title to minerals in the strips between their coasts and historic seaward boundaries.

But the tidelands issue has flared up with Louisiana's claim—opposed by the Interior Department—to an outer boundary three leagues (about 10 miles) instead of three miles from shore. At stake are state vs. federal rights to a fortune in oil deposits.

In 1952, Congress passed, but President Truman vetoed, a tidelands bill transferring title to the states. In the Senate, 24 Democrats joined 26 Republicans to pass the bill, 50-25. Among the 11 GOP senators who voted against giving title to the states was Fred Seaton.

Question: Does ex-Sen. Seaton still oppose transfer of title to the submerged lands from federal to state governments? Other points in Seaton's voting record while in the senate may draw queries.

Of greater interest to Democrats on the interior committee, however, may be a speech Seaton gave before a group of fellow Republicans in Topeka, Kansas, on Jan. 29, 1952. Seaton, who lived in Kansas before moving to Nebraska in 1937 and worked for GOP presidential candidate Alf Landon in the 1936 campaign, combined an attack on the Truman administration with a strong plea for a middle-of-the-road Republican party.

"It does us little credit as a political party and it does us no good whatever at the polls to cry 'socialism' every time a measure is offered to combat or correct an evil ... Certainly it is not socialism to abolish the sweatshop, to regulate hours and put a floor under wages ... Nor is it socialism to conserve our natural resources, to build dams for flood control, for irrigation, and for electric power, or to bring electricity to the farmers ..."

Democrats have charged the Eisenhower administration in general and ex-Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay in particular with a "give-away" of natural resources to private interests, and a slowdown of federal dam-building projects.

Of one thing he can be certain Tuesday—a friendly reception when he left the senate in 1952. 17 of his colleagues—including nine Democrats—took the floor to extol him. Said Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill.): "He is a noble American, and we mourn his departure from the senate."

Pacific Northwest Left Without Anyone In High Authority in Interior Department

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Statesman Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The Pacific Northwest now has no one in a position of high authority in the Department of the Interior, the federal department which is most vital to the region.

Both Fred A. Seaton, the newly appointed secretary, and Clarence A. Davis, the undersecretary, are from the Cornhusker state. Davis is expected to stay on under Seaton for some months, possibly until after the November elections, so no change is anticipated there soon.

5. What is a word beginning with "as" that means "to emphasize"?

order of rank are three assistant secretaries who look after different agencies under the sprawling Interior Department. These are:

- 1. Assistant Secretary for Land Management, held by Wesley D'Ewart of Montana.
2. Assistant Secretary for Water and Power, held by Fred Aandahl of North Dakota.
3. Assistant Secretary for mineral resources, held by Felix E. Wormser of New York.

The closest the Pacific Northwest now comes to a high post is Director of the Bureau of Land Management, who is Edward Woolzley of Idaho.

When McKay was secretary, he did not fill the various high posts at Interior from his own section of the country, but he gave the various other sections good representation.

The only other top job held by a Pacific Northwest man was that of assistant to the secretary, who was Raymond Lavis of Seattle, a retired insurance company executive.

The Southwest still has one man in a top job. He is the commissioner of Indian Affairs, Glenn L. Emmons, of Arizona. The Rocky Mountain states claim the commissioner of reclamation, Wilbur A. Deneimier, of Colorado. And no position could be more important to that area than chief of reclamation, now that Congress has authorized construction of the Upper Colorado reclamation project.

Although Tudor is gone, California has John L. Farley, head of the Fish and Wildlife Service. Wyoming is represented by the department chief legal officer, J. Reuel Armstrong, Interior's solicitor.

When Seaton was nominated last week by President Eisenhower to succeed McKay, he declined to say whether he would make any change in the top posts of the Interior Department.

Unless he does, the Pacific Northwest will remain the only major section of the West without one of its own in a position of high authority at Interior.
