

Cain Rates Fascist Threat Above Reds

By J. W. DAVIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harry P. Cain, critic of the government's loyalty-security program, said Tuesday the nation should worry more about Fascism than Communism.

He appeared before the Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights, headed by Sen. Hennings (D-Mo.).

"Rights of free men and women have been disregarded and trampled" in the operations of the administration program designed to get and keep security risks out of government employment, Cain said.

But, he said, he gathered from his face-to-face talk with President Eisenhower at the White House last Thursday that the President is determined "to protect the individual against any unreasonable encroachment on his movement, speech and mind."

Double Reappointment

Cain is a member of the subversive activities control board, but has said he does not expect to be reappointed to the $15,000-a-year job when his term expires in August.

He was a Republican member of the Senate in 1947-53, when he battled against what he described as Leftism. Defeated for reelection, he was put on the subversive board whose job it is to determine what organizations shall be listed as a Communist or Communist front group.

In mentioning the threat of Fascism today, Cain told the senators it is to be hoped that American anti-Communism does not lead to pro-Fascism. He said:

"Our nation has less to worry about from the clear and present danger of Communism than it has for worry about from the secret and more pernicious danger of Fascism."

No Name Given

As an example of Fascism, Cain cited the case of a young Korean War veteran from Seattle, without giving his name.

Cain said the Army labeled the man a security risk and refused to clear him for a Red Cross job overseas. He said the man, given a choice by the Red Cross of being fired or resigning, resigned.

The veteran kept up the fight, however, and sent a letter to the President which the White House never acknowledged, Cain said.

No Reasons Given

Cain related that he has checked and learned that neither the Red Cross nor the young man was ever informed of the reasons he was tabbed as a risk.

"If anyone abhors my application of Fascism to this prime example of it," Cain challenged, "let him come forward with a more accurate description of it."

He related that he had told Eisenhower about this case, and added:

"I don't want to put words in the President's mouth, but his expression of indignation over how this butchered up situation came about is literally as real as I could bring to you."

Cain said this case was a sample of what he called bureaucratic invasion of individual rights and freedoms, and repeated his plea that Americans not "become so anti-Communist as to become pro-Fascist."

NAACP Fight Over Alabama Ban Promised

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People says it "will not be intimidated" by an Alabama injunction banning the NAACP from that state.

The NAACP board of directors said Monday the organization will fight the ban "in the courts and in the arena of public opinion."

Board Chairman Dr. Channing H. Tobias said the board adopted a policy statement that "instructs the NAACP attorneys to take the necessary legal steps to obtain a hearing on the merits of the Alabama injunction at the earliest possible time with a view to dissolving the court's restraining order."

The court order restrains the NAACP from doing business in Alabama on grounds that its actions in the state have been aimed at violation of Alabama law.
