Girls Staters Choose County, City Officers

Delegates to the 15th annual Girls State Tuesday elected mayors and sheriffs as they set up city and county governments in sessions on the Willamette University campus.

Today the 240 selected girls from throughout the state will organize their own party conventions as they delve further into the processes of Democratic government. Candidates will make campaign speeches at an evening rally at Waller Hall.

Mayor Robert White of Salem was guest of the group of girl mayors at a luncheon Tuesday, while sheriffs were hostesses to Marion County Sheriff Denver Young at dinner.

Praise From Captains
Featured Tuesday speaker was Capt. Walter G. Andes, U. S. Air Force, state coordinator for the Ground Observer Corps.

"Women are the backbone of the observer corps," said Capt. Andes, "and without their help it would not have been possible to carry on the program in the last four years."

Capt. Andes added that the observer corps provides an opportunity for young ladies to contribute toward defense of their country. The speaker showed two films dealing with jet combat operations.

Unkne Place Names
In setting up their city and county governments, delegates reached for such descriptive titles as Pain County and its cities of Ache and Ouch; Filibuster County and municipalities of Rant and Rave; Nod County and cities of Winkum and Blunkum; the cities of Shine and Twinkle in Star County; municipalities of Trial and Error in Booboo County; and Towel County and its townships of His and Hers.

Elected to mayorships were the following 12 girls: Carol Stolk and Donna Hamman, both of Salem; Mary Ellen McCleary, Dallas; Gail Larsen, Silverton; Dee Miller, Beaverton; Kay St. James, Portland; Carol Hornish, Springfield; Sybil Rothlow, Bend; Karen Madson, Junction City; Marilyn Dixon, Portland; Linda Thompson, Astoria; and Diane Chaney, Portland, Salem Girl Chosen Elected as sheriffs were Patti Craggett, Salem; Ann Wilson, Corvallis; Marsha Edge, Baker; Roberta Pruitt, Klamath Falls; Virginia Basler, Milwaukie; and Marion Harris, Coquille.

An amateur hour, comprised of 33 performances, was an evening feature of the Tuesday program. A featured speaker today will be Mark Hatfield, retiring dean of men at Willamette and Republican nominee for secretary of state.

Girls State, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, concludes on Sunday.

New Homes Authorized

Four new houses in Salem and a major cannery alteration were authorized in building permits issued Tuesday by the city engineers office.

The new house permits were taken by Mr. and Mrs. Lester Green for a $25,000 house at 1895 Rio Vista Way, formerly Reservoir Street; H. W. Dunkel, 1010 Terrace Dr., $11,400; G. J. ## School Board To View Faye Wright Plans Possible approval of preliminary plans for Faye Wright Elementary School is seen of Thursday night's meeting of the Salem School Board.

Construction of the school was originally scheduled for this summer, but the board decided to give priority to addition projects at Four Corners, Morningside, Middle Grove and Washington schools where growth problems were anticipated.

Present plans call for construction next year on a site between 22nd and 23rd streets near Market Street. Preliminary plans for the 7-classroom and library structure have been completed by Salem Architect James L. Payne and will be considered by the board Thursday night. If approved the architect will prepare working drawings in anticipation of the bid call in 1957.

Wary City Planners Weigh YW's Alley Name Problems

How to help the YWCA skirt around an "alley door" designation of its west entrance is one of the problems Salem Planning Commission tried to solve Tuesday night at City Hall.

Salem teen agers use that entrance regularly for social affairs at the YWCA and ought to have something better to call it than the alley door, the commission heard by letter from Mrs. Robert Sprague, chairman of the YW's Teen Age Committee.

She suggested the name "Y-Way" or "Tele-Y Lane" be given the alley between the YW and the telephone building on State Street.

Fear Many Requests
Alley naming hasn't confronted the planners in recent years, and street naming never turns out to be quite as simple as it might appear to a layman. Perhaps with this in mind, the commissioners responded somewhat gingerly to the YW request.

City Engineer J. H. Davis hoped an alley name here wouldn't reopen "a siege" of former years when many neighborhoods wanted alleys named after flowers planted uniformly along back property lines.

Commissioner Urlin Page suggested a special committee might be needed to consider the YW plan. Commissioner John Carlin favored quicker action.

"If they want Y-Way, Y-not?" Postal Puzzle Possible
Planning Engineer C. A. McClure wondered if naming the alley would lead to requests for new postal addresses and Commissioner Robert K. Powell suggested the city manager be consulted for a statement of city policy.

Someone suggested if the YW went ahead with an unofficial name of its own making, then they could change it at will in the future.

Result Tuesday night: The YW request was referred to Commissioner Stuart Compton's streets and traffic committee, along with two proposals for vacation of street sections where former railroad crossings have been closed, and along with some of the other city problems at hand.

YMCA Camp Pool Near Completion

The Salem YMCA's new concrete swimming pool at Camp Silver Creek is expected to be completed about July 1. General Secretary Gus Moore said Tuesday.

The pool, being built from donated labor, materials and funds, will be used in the YM's annual camping programs. It will replace a small lake which has provided swimming facilities in other years.

Moore said the new pool will be more suitable for swimming instruction because the water won't be so cold. The project is 60 feet long and its widest point is 40 feet.

The chapter made plans for a summer picnic for members and all department personnel to be held at the Hugh Taylor home. Funds were voted to send Lauer, alternate delegate, to the General Council of OSEA in November. The new president will be delegate.

The chapter is supporting the Department of Agriculture princess, Joann Ertsgaard, in the Willamette River Days queen contest. As the first work project under the new officers, members voted to repair chairs and tables for the coffee room in the building now being remodeled for occupancy of the department.
