Silverton Police, Judge Urged to Bury Hatchet

By LILLIE L. MADSEN
Staff Writer, The Statesman

SILVERTON—A "peaceable argument" was what Mayor Harry V. Carson termed the invited discussion between Chief of Police R. R. Main and Municipal Police Judge Jeff Hoyt at a special City Council meeting Tuesday night.

In opening the meeting, Mayor Carson stated that it was called in an effort to "iron out" misunderstandings between the two departments.

"These misunderstandings probably don't amount to much now, but they could grow into difficulties which would be good neither for the individuals involved nor for the city itself. We invited the two of you here to discuss openly the trouble we've been hearing discussed on the street corner," the mayor said.

"No Disagreement"
Chief Main, when asked for his opinion, said he didn't "know what it was all about. I've never had any disagreement with the judge. Some of the policemen have complained that they make arrests and the fines are suspended. The offenders laugh at them. One boy came in four or five times and was fined $20, $25 and $15 twice—all suspended. Finally, the sheriff picked him up, went through our records and couldn't understand why the fines were suspended." The chief added that one policeman left because of "cases like this."

James Hollingsworth, a council member, broke in to ask if "it is any business or concern of the police" how the judge disposes of a case. At the same time Judge Hoyt asked the police why he had dismissed a case because, he, Hoyt, was not there. The case, the judge said, had "been postponed."

"Gone Fishing"
Main, in answer to Hollingsworth, said that while it was not the business of the police what became of the case, he hated to lose his policemen, and he "wondered what he was supposed to do with a man who repeatedly gets drunk." To Hoyt, the chief replied that he hadn't been notified that Hoyt "had gone fishing" on the day of court, and as no judge was there, and the defendant was, he had no choice other than to dismiss the case. Hoyt replied that he had left a note on the chief's desk, which the chief said he had not received.

"Psychology" Cited
City Attorney Rex Albright offered the information that it was "common judicial practice to set a fine at $25 and suspend $10 or $15 of it," and added "the psychology of this is that it makes the offender feel good."

Carl Handy, councilman, suggested that the court be held on regularly stipulated days and hours, and that if the regular judge cannot be present his assistant (to be named this week by the council) should be there. He added that while he didn't believe in "being too hard" on offenders, some degree of "strictness might help establish respect for the law."

Harmony Asked
Councilman R. J. Cooley asked the two men to "bury" the hatchet and "work toward harmony in the departments", to which the mayor added that difficulties had best be taken up with the city manager, who is in charge of police, and that he would bring to the council difficulties that needed further discussing.

At the close of the hour-long discussion, it was decided that, in addition to holding court regularly, and to adding an assistant judge, that there should be a bulletin board in the police office where future cases were listed, so that both police and judge would know when they were coming up.
