PORTLAND (AP) - A light plane crashed on a quiet residential street here Saturday night, killing the two men aboard. A. E. Thomas, who lives about 250 yards down the street from the crash scene, said the plane, with its motor dead, came in from the west, clipped off the tops of some high trees, struck a power line and then crashed into parked car in the street. Thomas said the crash sounded like "four or five cars smashing The dead were identified from papers on their bodies as Charles Parton, 24, and Archie W. Payne,

Residential Area The crash occurred at N.E. 15th and Mason streets, a residential area at about 9:30 p.m. Thomas said the plane, after striking the empty car, bounced onto the sidewalk. One man was killed outright. The other was breathing for a time, but he too was dead by the time an ambu-lance arrived. Thomas said. The bodies of both were badly mangled. bors was outside at the time and heard a voice from the plane say: "Arkie, for God's sake pull it up." Seconds later the plane crashed. Tanks Dry

There was no fire and police said the gas tanks of the plane were dry. They speculated that the plane had run out of gas and was attempting a landing in a nearby wider street at the time of the crash.

Parton's home was believed to be only three blocks from the crash scene. Payne was the owner of the plane, a Fairchild TT 26, and he
