Tripe, Malignant Meat Liked by Many Cooks

In the confused minds of some folk, even housewives—tripe is a kind of fish and the word is sometimes used derogatorily, but actually tripe is the inner layer of the calf's stomach, and very good eating.

Sometimes it's sold fresh, other times pickled, if the latter it freshened in water. One should select the honeycomb tripe as best. The French cook prepares her tripe this way:

TRIPLE LYONNAISE
Salt and pepper
1 1/2 pounds tripe
2 tablespoons butter or oil
Wash, cut in squares. Heat oil or butter in a heavy saucepan and fry onions in it until yellow. Add tripe and brown on both sides. Season, cook 5 minutes and serve very hot.

A famous Czechoslovakian cook selects soup as her favorite way of preparing tripe. Her recipe goes this way:

TRIPLE SOUP
Cut one pound of tripe in 1-inch squares and cover with cold water. Boil for half an hour. Drain, run cold water through the tripe and cover with fresh water. Add one teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper and boil until tripe is tender, about two hours longer, replenishing water as it boils away. Add a pint of well-seasoned soup stock and one tablespoon minced parsley and half clove of pierced garlic. Thicken slightly with a tablespoon each of flour and butter blended together.

A meat cookery expert from one of the largest meat packers suggests the following recipes for tripe:

BROILED TRIPE
Cover tripe with water, add 1 tablespoon salt, cover, heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 1 hour or until fork tender. Cut into serving-sized pieces. Place smooth side up on the broiler rack, brush liberally with butter, mayonnaise or salad oil and broil 3 inches from source of heat for 5 minutes. Turn honeycomb side up and brush again with butter, mayonnaise or oil and broil for 5 minutes or until lightly browned. Season.

She also pan broils the tripe this way:

PAN-FRIED TRIPE
1 pound cooked tripe
French dressing
1 egg
1/4 cup milk
1 cup fine breadcrumbs
1/4 cup fat
Cut cooked tripe into serving sized pieces. Brush with the French dressing. Dip tripe first into egg and milk mixed together, then in crumbs. Pan fry in hot fat, turn and brown on other side. Serve hot with tart pickle relish, sliced lemon or tomato sauce.
