Superior Intended to March McKeon Platoon Into Swamp

By ARTHUR EVERETT

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (AP)—A senior drill sergeant testified Friday that he intended to march Marine Platoon 71 into the deadly marshes of Ribbon Creek. He said S. Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon beat him to it.

The march last April 8 cost the lives of six young Marine recruits who drowned. McKeon is being tried by court-martial for their deaths.

S. Sgt. Edward A. Huff, 38, of Chicago, with chiseled features and shaven head, was McKeon's non-commissioned superior officer.

He said it was the practice at this sprawling 5,000-acre training base to discipline balky recruits by marching them into swamps at night.

Huff called the 74 members of Platoon 71 "just mediocre" as recruits. He was so dissatisfied with them, he added, that he threatened them before April 8, "I'll take you down to the swamps."

"Did you intend to take them in?" the prosecution asked.

"Yes sir," Huff replied, his deep, military voice sounding slightly hollow over loudspeakers that flanked the witness chair in the base auditorium.

Didn't Have Time

"Why didn't you take them in?" he was asked.

"Because I had a training schedule to meet and I didn't have the time," Huff said.

In further testimony, the tanned, compactly built sergeant said he never advanced the idea of the night march to Sgt. McKeon. Huff said he, himself, never actually had conducted such a disciplinary march and never saw any other drill instructor conduct one.

"I have heard drill instructors say they have but I have not actually seen it," he added.

Several Accusations

McKeon, 31-year-old junior drill instructor from Worcester, Mass., is being tried by a seven-man court-martial panel on charges of involuntary manslaughter, oppression of recruits and drinking on duty. He is not accused of being drunk.

The father of two small children, he is accused of criminal negligence in leading Platoon 71 into creek waters that surged with an unexpectedly strong, sucking tide.

If convicted, McKeon faces a maximum of a prison term of five or six years and a dishonorable discharge from the Marine Corps.

The defense of McKeon scored a victory in the courtroom in the court-martial's fifth day by gaining the right to introduce testimony by Huff about the practice of night marches at this base on the humid seacoast of South Carolina.

Said Not Admissable

The prosecution said such testimony was not admissible and argued:

"We aren't concerned so much that night marches were made, we are not concerned so much that men were taken into the water, but that he (McKeon) took non-swimmers into 10 feet of water over their head. That, sir, is negligence."

However, law officer Capt. Irving N. Klein, functioning like a judge in a civilian case, ruled that the defense could offer such testimony. Defense attorney Emile Zola Berman of New York City refused to concede that the water stood at that depth during the night march.

Berman contends that McKeon was just following a Parris Island custom when he marched his men into Ribbon Creek, and that it was an accepted disciplinary maneuver rather than selfish personal tyranny on McKeon's part.

Boy Emperor To Testify at China Trials

By LEONARD LEFKOW

HONG KONG (AP) — The first news in six years of Henry Pu-Yi, the one-time "boy emperor" of all China, came from Peiping Friday with the announcement he had testified at a trial of high officials of the former Japanese puppet state of Manchukuo.

Peiping radio said 28 Japanese were sentenced to prison for terms ranging from 1 to 20 years for alleged crimes during the 14 years of Japan's rule of Manchukuo, the name they gave to China's northeastern province of Manchuria.

Pu-Yi was the puppet emperor Kang Teh during Japan's rule. Both Red China and Nationalist China convicted him of treason in absentia for alleged traffickings with Japan. Peiping radio said today he was still "in custody" but gave no details.

Now 50 Years Old

Lanky, bespectacled Pu-Yi, now 50, began his career as a pawn of fate in 1908, at the age of 2, when he ascended China's dragon throne and became Emperor Husan Tung. But the Chinese revolution of 1911 toppled the 268-year-old Manchu dynasty and Husan Tung abdicated in 1912. He continued to live in the walled palace, and even was restored to power—for a week—by one of China's warlords.

Disguised as a coolie he escaped to a sanctuary in the Japanese concession of Tientsin in 1924. There he lived quietly as "Mr. Pu-Yi" until 1931 when the Japanese grabbed Manchuria and proclaimed him first as regent and then as emperor.

His "palace" was part of a barbed wire compound which the Japanese used as the headquarters of their salt monopoly.

Captive of Russia

He was captured by the Russians in 1945. Moscow promised to surrender him to China, but did not keep the promise until long after the Communists had driven the Nationalists from the mainland.

In 1946 Pu-Yi was taken to Tokyo under Russian guard and testified at war crimes trials against prominent Japanese. The last news of him was in 1950, when a returned Japanese prisoner of war reported he was living an easy life in a large house in Khabarovsk, Siberia, where he spent his time whittling and playing Mah-Jong.

The news Friday meant that he may have been brought back to spend the rest of his days as a prisoner in the land where as a sickly child he was the ruler in name.

100th Birthday Goes By, Fete Still to Come

NOVARA, Italy (AP) — Teresa De Agostini and her six children had everything all set to celebrate her 100th birthday Aug. 10.

The local newspaper at Cerano, her native city, dug up the birth certificate and found she should have celebrated No. 100 last Dec. 30. But the family is going ahead with the August celebration.

Grain Market Closes Lower

CHICAGO (AP) — Grains closed lower on the Board of Trade Friday, soybeans suffering the most from general liquidation.

It was the last day for trading in July futures and most of them sold off in the closing minutes.

A few wheat and rye futures managed to end higher, enjoying a rally during the last hour.

Wheat closed 1¼ lower to ⅝ higher, corn ¾-2⅝ lower, oats 1⅜ lower to ⅝ higher, rye ½ lower to ¼ higher, soybeans 3¾-9¾ lower and lard unchanged to 13 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Wheat encountered a little hedging pressure during the day but this was fairly well absorbed. Buying came from grainmen who felt wheat prices eventually would work higher. Portugal was scheduled to buy two cargoes of wheat, but postponed the purchase.
