

(Sec. III) Statesman, Salem, Ore., Sunday, July 29, '56

Lazy Days for the Teen-age Contingent . . .

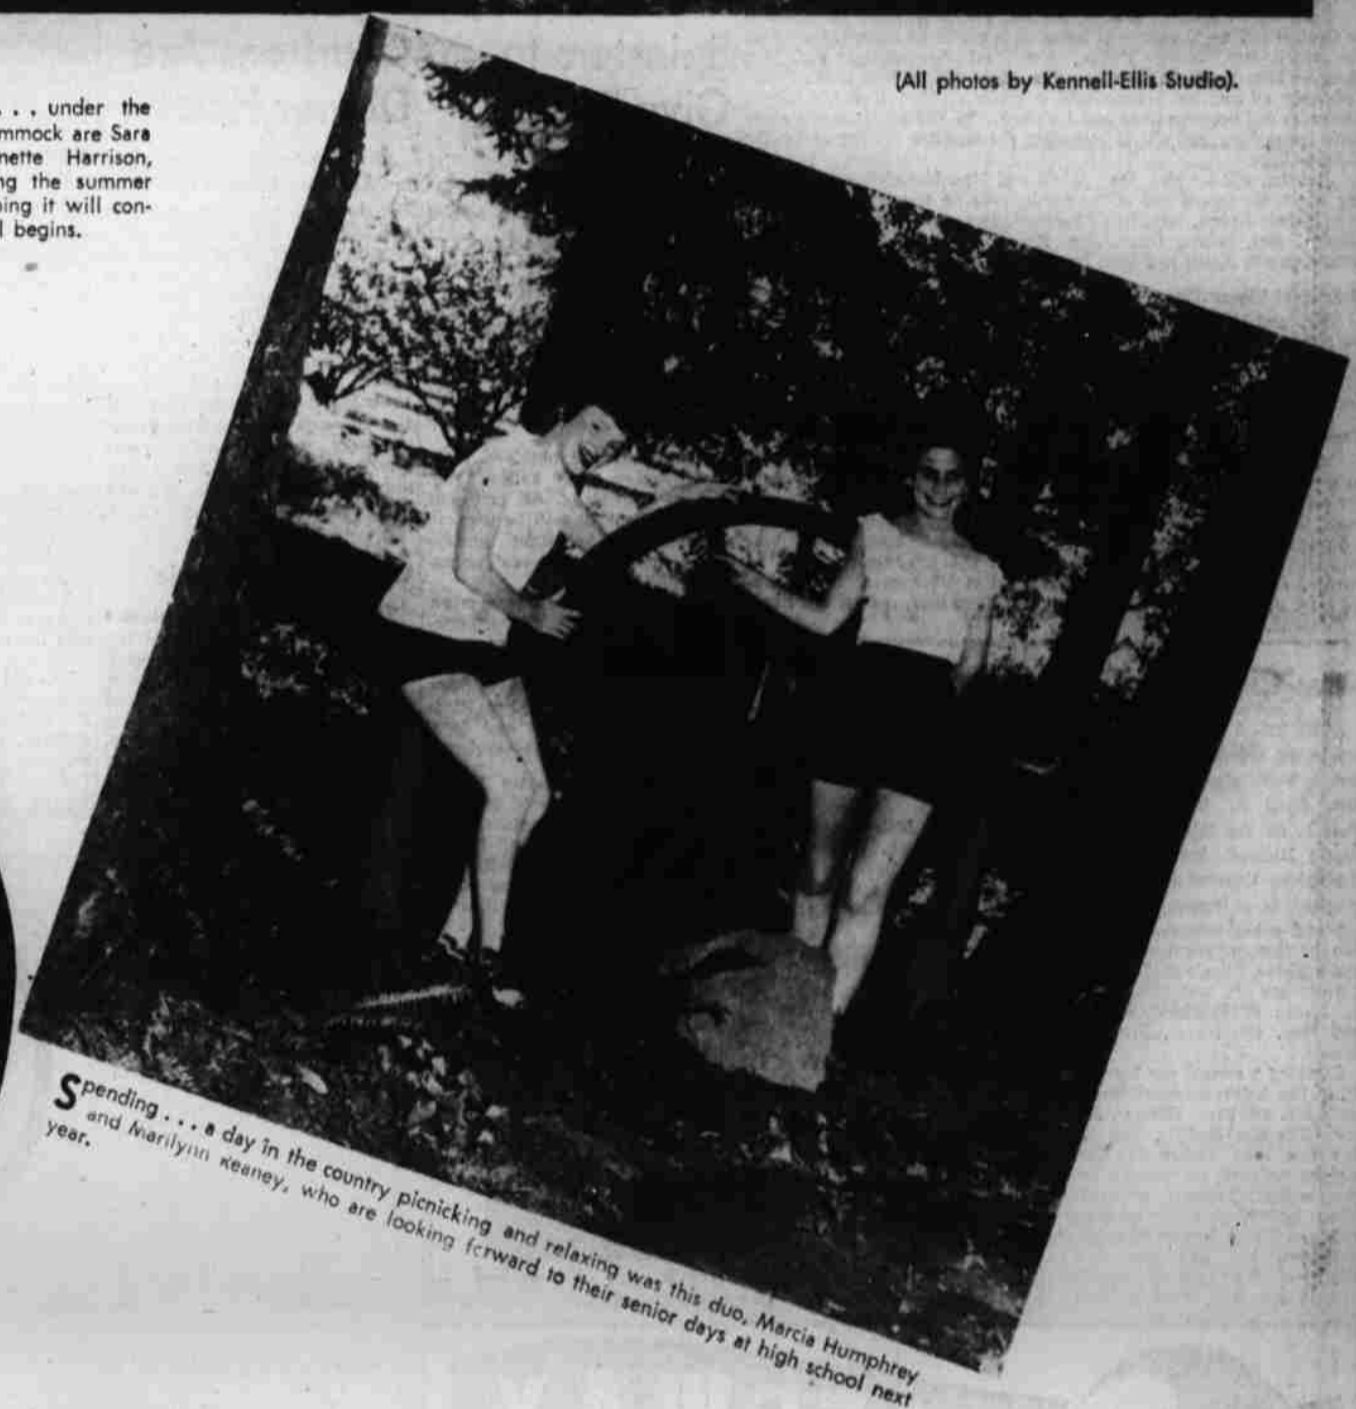

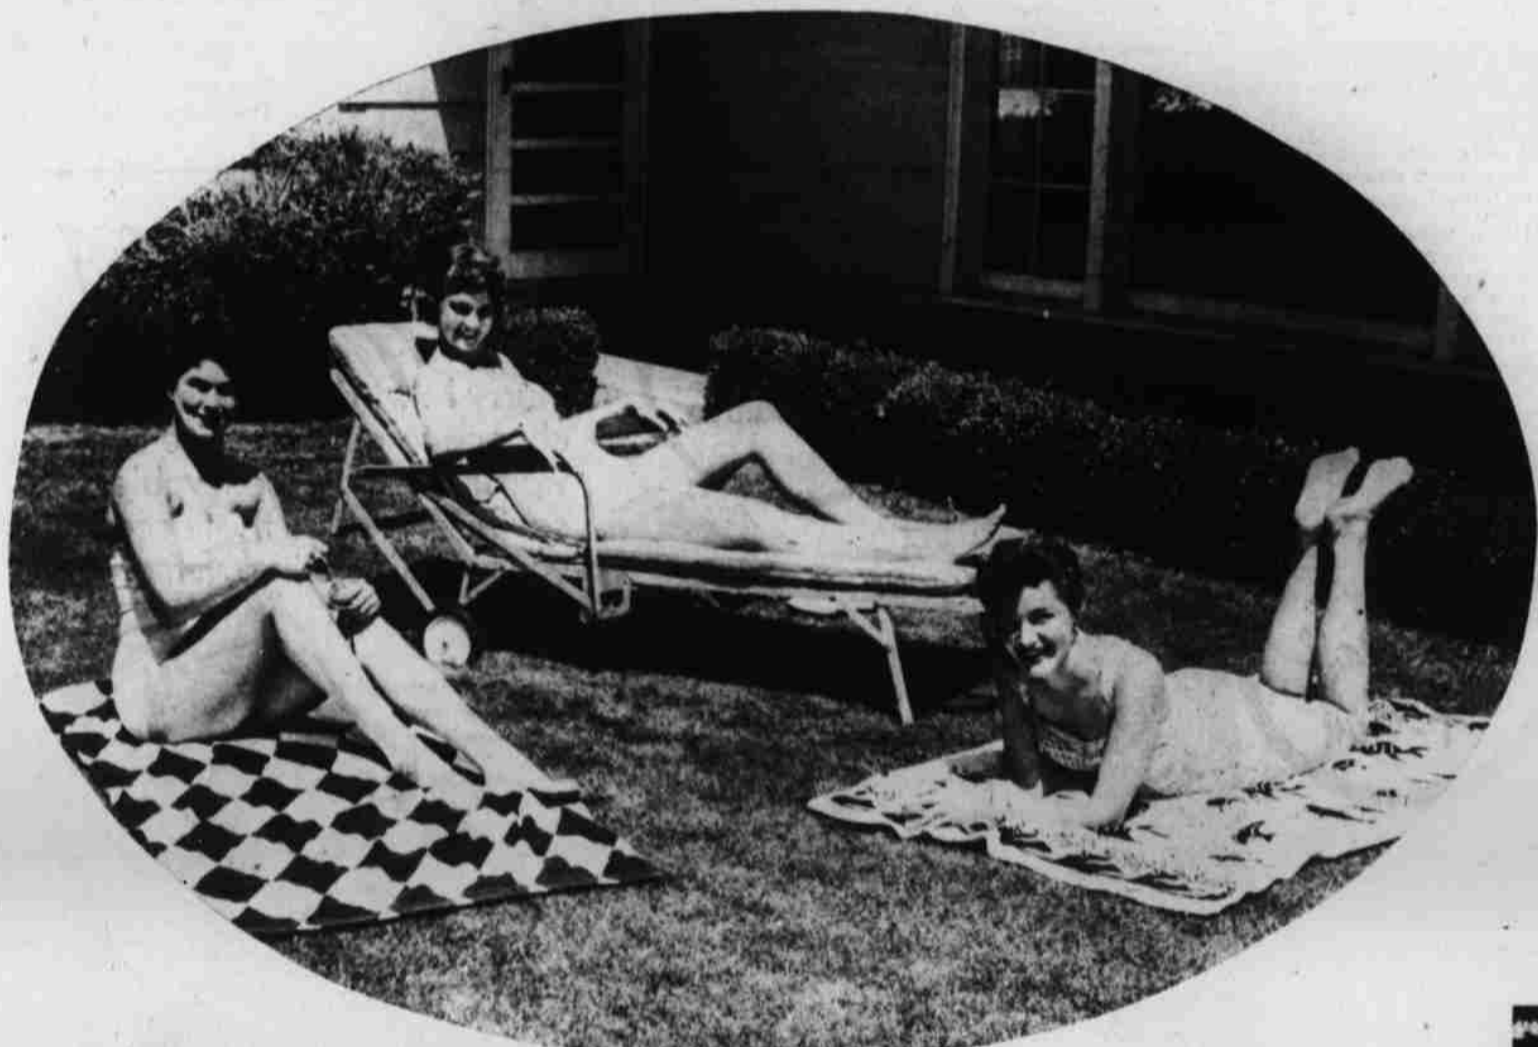

Relaxing . . . after a tennis match are, left to right, Doris Hein, Jackie LaDue, Donna Hamman and Ann Robinson. During the warm days and in between working hours high school girls take advantage of their summer vacation and enjoy their favorite sports.

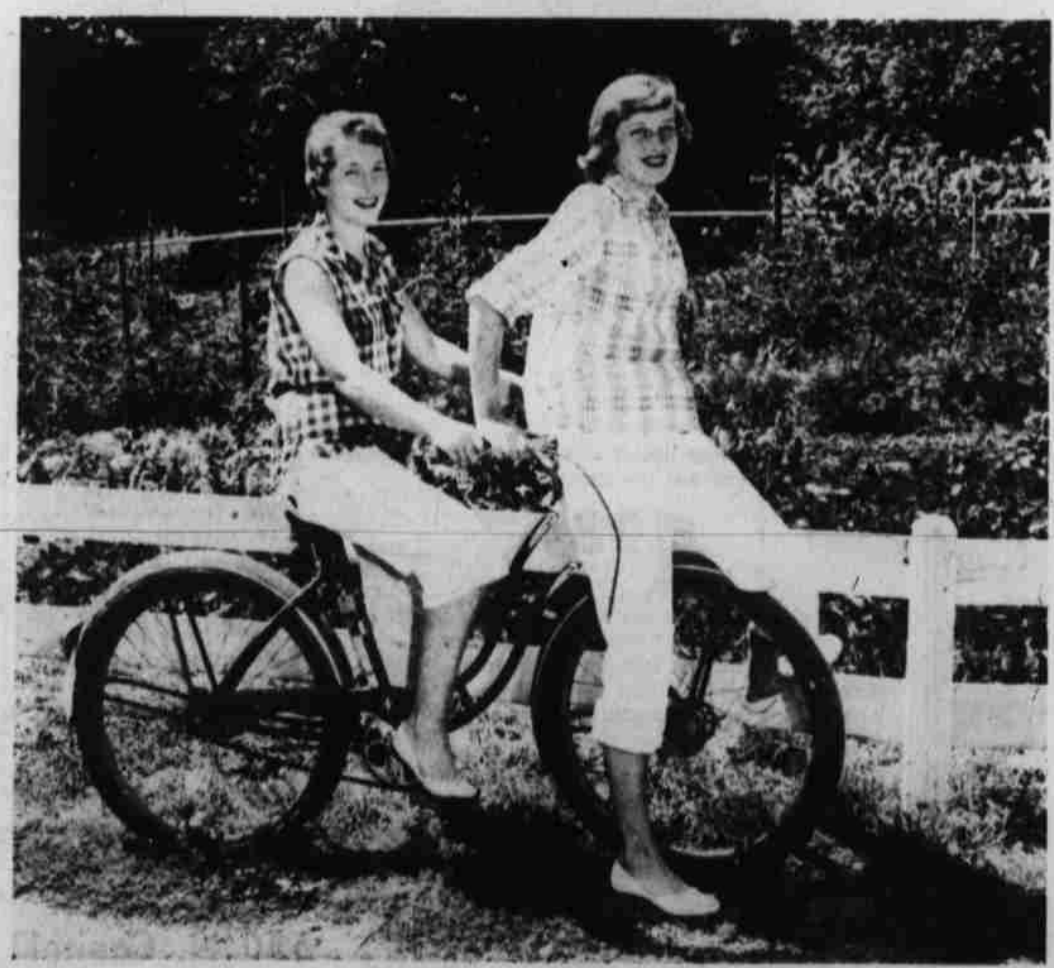

Keeping cool . . . under the trees in a hammock are Sara Allen and Jeanette Harrison, who are enjoying the summer weather and hoping it will continue until school begins.

(All photos by Kennell-Ellis Studio).

Spending . . . a day in the country picnicking and relaxing was this duo, Marcia Humphrey and Marilyn Keaney, who are looking forward to their senior days at high school next year.

Sunbathing . . . is always a popular pastime for the young contingent during the summer. Left to right, above, are Beth Horn, Jean Attebury and Sally Joseph, who are acquiring grand suntans during the warm weather.

Bicycling . . . is also a favorite sport for the young set, whether it is warm or cool. At the left, are Mary Wood and Judy Larson about to take off for a ride down a country road.

Tall Timber Lou . . . gets her carrots for the day from Brenda Aschenbrenner, while Judie Seamster and Jackie Doerfler look on. Lou, who is six years old, has been raised by Judie Seamster at Tall Timber, the country home of her parents, the Floyd Seamsters, where the pictures on this page were taken.

