Hot winds have dropped so many buds that few, if any, flowers could be shown, Mrs. Deane Curtis, society president, said in announcing the cancellation Saturday.

Mrs. Curtis said that in the 16 years she has been a Salem resident this is the first time the begonias have not developed satisfactorily for showing. ## New Device Assures Accurate Paint

Matching a color or getting exactly the right intensity will be easy with this new machine invented by Hills H. Heat, a Rosedale machine designer. The simple, inexpensive device solves the problem of extracting all the pigment from tubes produced by many companies for mixing paint in order in the store. Here, J. Paul Campbell tries out the machine he inspired by complaining about the problem to his inventive friend.

Rosedale Man's Machine Ends Paint Mix Troubles

Statesman News Service
ROSEDALE — What happens when a "do it yourself" home decorator achieves just exactly the color he wants and then runs out of paint before he finishes the room?

All too many times, according to Hills H. Heat of Rosedale, he finds it impossible to match the color exactly. And all too many times, because it is impossible to tell how much paint a surface will absorb, the painter must either play safe and buy too much or trust to luck and take a chance on running short.

So Heat, a machine designer who commutes weekly to his job in Portland, built a machine that insures getting exactly the same mixture every time a certain formula is followed.

Similar Machines

The trouble, Heat explains, is that without his machine it is impossible to get all the oil and pigment out of the tubes now made by many paint manufacturers for mixing colors in the store. Several similar machines have been produced, but none that he knows of has proven satisfactory, he said.

Besides leaving some of the color in the tube, they spill some onto the counter and the person operating the machine, he said.

Heat's machine is simple. It includes a blade that opens the tube and a pair of corrugated rollers that strip the last drop from the tube as it is cranked through them.

Over Paint Can

The entire operation is performed over the paint can, so any accidental spillage goes into the final mixture, anyway. The paint is then put on the store's "shaker" for mixing in the manner conventional for such paints.

Heat went to work on the problem because of the disappointment of a friend, J. Paul Campbell, owner of J. Paul Campbell Co., in not being able to get all of the color from the tube into the can. Campbell now uses Heat's machine in his store and finds it accurate, simple to operate and easy to clean.

A patent is being sought through J. T. Anderson, Salem coordinator of inventions, and a Portland company has tentative plans for manufacture of the machine, Heat said.

New WU Instructor From Greece to See Relatives First Time

A new physics, engineering and drawing instructor at Willamette University will see his son-in-law and three grandchildren for the first time on his arrival in Salem from Greece.

The appointment of Alexander G. Michailides of Salonika, Macedonia was announced Saturday by the university. He is the father of Mrs. Walter Penk, 1810 E. Nob Hill.

A widower, he will be accompanied by his other daughter, Miss Anastasia Michailides.

Michailides is resigning from United Nations employment as chief welfare officer for Greek refugees migrating to Australia.

He has been a college teacher in Turkey and an executive of the American Farm School at Salonika, a general secretary of the YMCA at Salonika, war-time Red Cross worker and more recently field representative for the American Economic Mission to his country.

In U. S. Before

He has been in the U. S. once before, studying YMCA work and sociology at George Williams College, Chicago, in 1921. He also has a bachelor of science degree in mathematics and physics from Roberts College, Istanbul, Turkey, where he later taught, and two years graduate work in electrical engineering.

He speaks English fluently as well as Greek, French and German. He was suggested for the Willamette position by his son-in-law, Walter Penk, Oregon Journal reporter in Salem. High recommendations from Americans who had worked with him in Greece clinched the job.

Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Penk are hoping Mrs. Penk's father and sister will arrive by Aug. 19, their sixth wedding anniversary and the third birthday of their second child.

Mrs. Penk came to the U. S. in 1948 to study English literature at Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash., on a scholarship arranged by friends in Greece. Penk was a reporter for the Walla Walla Union-Bulletin. Mrs. Penk is now a naturalized U. S. citizen and they moved to Salem in 1954. Their children are Michael, 4; Laura, 2; and Maria, 1 1/2.

Martin Heinrich Klaproth first identified uranium in 1789 while studying ores of the Joachimsthal silver mines of Bohemia.
