

Liberal Arts College Trains Union Leaders

By HERR THOMPSON
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 6 (AP)—Some of the liveliest labor talk in America today is going on in a babel of foreign voices each week-day at St. John's College, one of the nation's oldest liberal arts schools.

At the college's International Labor Center here, trade union leaders from around the globe are exploring such matters as the guaranteed annual wage, the AFL-CIO merger, social security and the Taft-Hartley Act.

It's part of a program to acquaint them with American society, trade unions, collective bargaining processes and labor laws before they set out on a tour of the nation's cities and industries. Specialists used.

Their instructors are members of the St. John's faculty and specialists from the fields of labor, industry and government.

The program is sponsored by the International Cooperation Administration as part of its technical exchange program. Its administrators regard it as an important wedge in the global battle against communism.

The labor program has grown from a small start in 1952 until it now includes most of the non-communist world. In the past year, 624 trade union and government labor officials from 40 countries streamed through the historic college, founded in 1696, for briefings ranging from one week to two months.

With emphasis
Seated around separate tables with earphones clamped to their heads, the conferees listen to an interpreter translate what a St. John's professor is saying.

Noting notes as he talks, they are ready with a barrage of questions when he finishes. The discussion is spirited. The questions frequently are tied in with some problem confronting a labor leader in his homeland. But a good bit of the course deals with the history and development of American unions with a heavy emphasis on methods by which U.S. unions have resisted communism.

"The basic aim of this program is to encourage working peoples of the world to organize and maintain free, democratic trade unions to combat communism," says John T. Doherty, the school's 28-year-old director.

"Labor groups are the first target of Communists in trying to take over a country. It's in America's interest to have strong trade unions abroad to resist such infiltration."

FILM FESTIVAL DUE

Your future health can be good or bad, depending on what you are doing now to protect it. If, when illness strikes, you delay seeking the skilled advice of your physician, you expose yourself to complications that later in your life may torment you.

Nature sends you pain or discomfort to warn you that something is wrong. Self-treatment drugs that temporarily relieve that pain or discomfort, may hide a trouble that can become serious. Be wise. At the first sign of illness get your physician's advice and let him treat the real cause of your trouble.
