Salem Golf Club Professional And 1956 Oregon Open Champion

The area's sportsminded people lost a great old friend the past week when L. C. (Corey) Eastman died. Corey had been in ill health for two years and had not been too active on the golfing scene. But anytime his doctor would allow it, he was on a golf course. Corey will be remembered by the little tolks, as he always had time to show the youngsters his many magic tricks. The former Silverton mayor led a full life, having been active in almost every sport one can think of Golf was his layorite, and his love of the game enriched his later years when it was impossible to take part in the more demanding games. Corey never destroyed a score card, and he had a record of virtually every round he had ever played whether it was good or bad. We sold him a cart in 1951, and he knew just how many miles it had logged as he pulled it around the golf courses. Enjoyable miles all, and made more enjoyable for the people who played with bim by knowing and playing with a real gentleman

Salem's Kent Meyers is home on leave from the Army this week and he looks great in spite of the fact that he's stationed in Texas and hasn't been playing any golf. Kent took his early training at Fort Ord in California, not far from Pebble Beach, and hoped it would be his permanent station. But he was shipped off to Texas, and back to the Lone Star State he goes following his leave. There just isn't anyplace to play the links where Kent is assigned. He isn't interested in becoming an officer, as it would prolong his stay in I note Sam's employ

Fetchick Didn't Fold Up This Trip

Mike Fetchick's first real hig win came his way Monday at San Francisco when he dumped the competition in the playoff for the Western Open title. If you will remember, Mike was the first round leader in the Western at Portland last year. He folded early in that one, but another year of experience has obviously cured him. The accounts of the four-man playoff made Doug Ford appear to be merely a disinterested party. But we're sure this was not the case. Dong was described as playing like a man who was in a horry to get out of town. Now if that writer knew Ford a little better, he would also know he plays with almost carefess speed and has made it pay off handsomely.

We were disappointed to see that Jay Hebert couldn't come through in the playoff after notching birdies on the last three holes in the regular competition. He still looks like the best of the young players to this writer. Jack Owens reminds us that Fetchick is the proud owner of the biggest pair of hands and feet on the tour. He wears a size Il shoe, which is a mighty big size for a guy only 6-1 in height .

The beaut rain of Monday night and Tuesday isn't exactly what's needed for the new green on the fourth hole at SGS. The water might wash the thing into the lake. The new green had a great start, thanks to the earlier good weather, and here's hoping the roof structure is strong enough to hold the soil during the downpours. If it does, we'll have a dandy new hole to play next

Three years of concentrated effort have paid off for Ott Berry. The transplanted Oklahoma native who talks about Oregon like a member of the Chamber of Commerce, gave up skiing and a good portion of his fishing activity 30 months ago to put full energy behind the golf game. Every hour he could spare from his JB Drive-In went to work on the practice tee. It was a very proud Mr. Berry who carded out a par

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 16 48-Trainer Meshach Tenney saio jate tonight that the great California racehorse. Swaps, "is not in any immediate danger" and discounted earlier reports the 4-year-old colt might have to be destroyed.

The trainer of the 4-year-old colt, who won the Kentucky derby in 1955 and later set four and equalled a fifth world record, isued a statement at Garden State Park here Swaps was injured during a morning workout Oct. 9. Earlier a reliable source reported that a team of four veterinarians was working to save the colt, who aggravated the injury Sunday while trying to get to his feet in the stall. The cast on the leg was broken at

"As previously announced we proceeded to change the cast on Swaps' hind leg today," Tenney said. "Since it was an interesting ians came in to observe and help change the cast.

Everything went as scheduled. There were a few spectators. Nothing of an unusual nature happened. What caused all of the wild and unfounded rumors to get circulated is beyond my comprehension.

When Swaps was hurt Oct. 9, Dr George R. Palmer, a veterinarian said X-rays disclosed two linear fractures of the cannon hone of the left hind leg. At that time Tenney said Swaps might be away from the races four months. Pal mer said it would be at least a month before the colt could be moved, and that he should recover and race again if the injury wasn't
