Bond Issue, 8 Candidates Set on Ballot

SILVERTON, Oct. 29—For the first time in a number of years, interest runs high in the local election at Silverton. In addition to eight candidates for four positions on the city council, there will be the question of a $175,000 bond issue for the construction of a modern filtration plant, on the city ballot.

The proposed bond issue would mature serially, the last one, not later than 20 years. The principal and interest would be paid by revenue from water rates, according to the issue being submitted to the voters. Mayor Harry V. Carson says that no tax levy will be needed in the financing for bond payment as worked out by the city officials. However, the question on the ballot carries a proviso for tax levy as a legal technicality for all bond sales of this kind. The filtration

Political Independence of Klamath County Might Help Republicans

(This is the last of a series of stories on Oregon politics by Paul W. Harvey Jr., Associated Press Correspondent at Salem, who has been touring the state).

By PAUL W. HARVEY JR.
KLAMATH FALLS, Oct. 29—With a long-time heavy Democratic majority, Klamath County has been traditionally independent in its voting. Many ranchers and farmers, while registered Democratic, often vote Republican.

An influx of Southern Democrats, many of whom are working in the state's lumber mills, is helping the Democrats. One Republican candidate said he was amazed at the large number of Southern accents among the mill workers.

Openly Back McKay
This fact, and the fact that some labor union members here openly support Doug McKay in his battle against Democratic Wayne Morse, has confused the picture here.

The Democrats hold a 3,300 lead in registration, but that isn't much of a gain in the past 10 years. The county looks safe for President Eisenhower, but political observers agree that McKay is running behind him. Ed Geary, Republican speaker of the state House of Representatives, says things look "tough" for McKay in this region.

Italy Anti-Red, Socialist Party Merger Forecast

ROME, Oct. 29—Giuseppe Saragat, Italy's vice premier and leader of the anti-Communist Socialist Democrat party, has predicted his party and Socialists now led by leftist Pietro Nenni will be united in one party by spring.

Efforts to reunite the anti-Communist Socialists and Nenni's fellow-traveling party have been frustrated by Nenni's continuing relations with Italian Communists.

The county gave Guy Cordon, Republican, a 234-vote margin two years ago in his losing fight against Sen. Richard L. Neuberger.

Two men, both Democratic laborers, said they would vote for McKay, and said some of their fellow workers would. One works for a railroad, and the other works in a mill.

Coon Popular
Congressman Sam Coon, Republican, and Al Ullman, his oppo-

ent, have been fighting hard for Klamath County's bloc of 20,000 votes. Coon is personally popular, having received more votes than any other candidate in 1954, when he carried the county by 1,000 votes.

The Democrats are better organized here than the Republicans. Florence Jenkins, of the Klamath Falls Herald and News, says the local Republicans complain that the state GOP organization isn't cooperating with them.

Mrs. McKay Praised
She says that Mrs. McKay, who appeared before a women's group a couple of weeks ago, is a better campaigner than her husband.

Klamath County has two of the most interesting legislative races that Oregon has had in years. For state senator, Sen. Harry Boivin, Democratic lawyer who is opposed for reelection by Ed Geary, Republican rancher, who was speaker in 1955. Each has a big popular following, and the outcome looks close.

State Rep. Henry Semon, potato grower who is a conservative, true Democrat, is running for reelection as an independent. He has served in 12 sessions, and has been a power on the joint ways and means committee.

Semon feared that if he ran as a Democrat, he might have been defeated in the primary. He says the regular Democratic organization was out to beat him because they don't consider him to be a true Democrat.
