From Roberts' Decorating Studio

The sun, shining through a break in the clouds, tints the pattern of damp leaves on the green lawn to a vibrant symphony of autumn colors. We stoop to find the smallest of them all and become lost in a study of its intricate perfection. Later, in the studio, we experience a like thrill as we examine the newest arrivals of fabrics. There are vibrant iridescent cottons shown in twenty-four shades—beautiful blues, red and cerise into purple, gold into brown tones, bottle greens and shiny black. The firm texture makes them suitable for furniture coverings. Think of using them in a room where walls and carpet have been kept subdued in color. There are new nylon and cotton tweeds of sturdy weaves on the market that have to be felt as well as seen to be appreciated. Mixtures of reds and greys are especially pretty. Other colors are mauve brown, citron yellow and peach-pink. New, too, are the simulated hand-woven upholstery fabrics. Rich new colors laid in hit-and-miss fashion on more subtle-colored backgrounds are shown in this group, like coral on light brown, blue on green and celadon on dark green, copper on citron. How lovely to use these on chairs to introduce the accent color which could be used in cushions and small details about a room. Then there are the more formal brocades, matelasses and brocatelles in beautiful new shades of red, gold, navy and the new plum. What a lift a tired-looking room would gain by using these exciting colors! The new iridescent linen-like fabric quilted in a double-needle pattern using two shades of thread "à la de ce monde!" and would be perfect on a small sofa. These are only a few of the many lovely, lovely fall introductions to the market. Bye till later.
