

Boys Declare Lamarca in Kidnap Area

By ARTHUR W. EVERETT
 MINEOLA, N.Y., Nov. 10 (AP)—Two teenage brothers today singled out Angelo Lamarca as the man they saw lurking near the scene of little Peter Weinberger's kidnaping last July 4.

The boys, Daniel Lucas, 13, and his brother, Michael, 15, testified at Lamarca's kidnap-slaying trial that they saw the defendant "slouching" in a battered Plymouth car near the Weinberger home about 15 minutes before the baby was stolen.

Daniel, got down from the witness stand, walked to within four feet of Lamarca and pointed at him to indicate that the defendant was the man he had seen in the car.

His brother made a similar identification by nodding his head at Lamarca. Both boys testified that a picture of Lamarca's car looked "a lot like" the car they saw less than a block from the Weinberger home that afternoon.

Note in Evidence
 Both brothers said the man they identified as Lamarca in the automobile appeared to be writing something in this connection. The state put in evidence the ransom note left by the kidnaper, which revealed for the first time his threat to the baby's life.

Written in green ink in a small hand on a single sheet of note-book-size paper, the ransom note read:

"Attention:
 'I'm sorry this had to happen but I am in bad need of money and couldn't get it any other way.
 'Don't tell anyone or go to the police about this, because I am watching you closely. I am scared stiff and will kill the baby at your first wrong move.
 'Just put $2,000 (two thousand) in small bills in a brown envelope and place it next to the signpost at the corner of Albermarle Road and Park Avenue at exactly 10 o'clock tomorrow (Thursday) morning. If everything goes smooth, I will bring the baby back and leave him on the same corner 'safe and happy' at exactly 12 noon.

"Can't wait!
 'No excuses. I can't wait!"

The note was signed "Your Baby Sitter."
 An attempt to pay the ransom was made as directed the next day but the kidnaper failed to appear. Police quoted Lamarca after his arrest as saying he brought the child to the scene but turned away when he saw police and newsmen there. Then he drove to the spot where he abandoned the baby.

Earlier Peter Weinberger's mother sobbed in anguish for her dead child as she identified for the jury the clothes the infant wore when he was kidnaped.

Fights for Control
 Tiny, brunet Mrs. Beatrice Weinberger, 32, had struggled for control for nearly an hour as she testified for the state against Lamarca, the kidnaper of her 22-day old son. He is accused of murdering the baby by abandoning it, in panic and fear beside a Long Island highway.

But when little Peter's diaper was displayed to her for identification, Mrs. Weinberger could not go on. She dropped her head in her hands and wept. Her moans echoed across the courtroom filled with some 50 silent spectators.

After a brief recess, Mrs. Weinberger stood in front of the witness box, clutching a railing to keep from collapsing, and identified the clothes in which she last dressed her baby.

Each article she identified with a flickering, tearful glance. Each time she then turned her head away. Thus she established as state's evidence a tiny undershirt, kimono, and a diaper and blanket.

No Denial
 Lamarca, 31, does not deny the kidnaping, for which he can be sent to the electric chair if convicted. He also is charged with first degree murder, also punishable by death.

He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity brought on by personal financial woe. A slight, dark-haired father of two small children of his own, Lamarca kept his head bowed, his eyes on the floor. Not once did he meet Mrs. Weinberger's eyes as she glanced his way.

Defense attorney David Markowitz waived his right to an opening statement to the all-male jury of fathers and grandfathers. He told newsmen that Lamarca will testify later in his own defense.

Dist. Atty. Frank Gulotta described in detail the kidnaping and subsequent manhunt—the nation's greatest kidnap search since Bobby Greenlease was stolen and slain in Kansas City in 1953.

Rift Reported in Lebanon Leaders

DAMASCUS, Syria, Nov. 10 (AP)—Reliable sources said tonight Lebanese Premier Abdulla Yafi offered and then withdrew his resignation following differences with President Camille Chamoun over their country's attitude to Britain and France.

The sources said Yafi wanted Lebanon to break diplomatic relations with Britain and France but that the President opposed the move.

According to the sources, Yafi withdrew his resignation after the heads of state of Arab countries, meeting in Beirut, agreed on a common stand toward Britain and France over Egypt.
