Dairymen Should Enlarge Youth Program, Jersey Cattle Club Told at Salem Meeting

By LILLIE L. MADSEN
Farm Editor, The Statesman

Because there's "no way for the dairy business to go but up now" the national program of the American Jersey Cattle Club plans to enlarge its youth program this coming year.

This was the point stressed by Rosel Hunter, American Jersey Cattle Club fieldman for the western states, at the annual meeting of the Oregon Jersey Cattle Club held Saturday at Senator Hotel.

"The national club is going to stress youth, and I suggest that all state clubs do the same. We're going out on a program to interest more young farmers in dairying—particularly in Jersey dairying," Hunter said, as he added "this is a good time to buy dairy cows. There's no way left for them or the industry to go now but up."

Youth Program
Following the national program, Ray Johnson, Canby, Oregon Jersey youth activities' chairman, reported that "Oregon has a good five youth program." He mentioned the number of calves which the club sponsored for the young folk of the Jersey cattle club, of the calves going into "new Jersey homes", and of the efforts of the youth committee toward a new youth dormitory at the State Fairgrounds. He pointed out that the $500,000 proposed for this building "is a small amount in comparison to the large amount being spent for youths after they have side-stepped the straight and narrow and are confined at MacLaren School." Should the new dormitory be built at the fairgrounds, this would be the first new youth dormitory there in 30 years, he said.

In keeping with the stepped-up youth program of the national, state and county Jersey Cattle clubs, youth had quite a day at the annual meeting of the Oregon Jersey Cattle Club Saturday at Senator Hotel. Ray Johnson, junior chairman, presented awards to Jerry Moore (center), Eagle Point, who received a Jersey pen set for his 579.6 pound butterfat production, and to Randolph Smith Jr., Canby, who was awarded for showing the top FFA Jersey for the year.

Windows Target For Air Rifles

Vandals, believed to be of the young variety, used air rifles to splinter glass in two cars parked at the Myers Glove Co., 1490 S. 12th St., city police said Saturday.

A complaint to officers said two holes were put in the glass of a 1956 Chevrolet owned by Elwood Myers and one hole was drilled in the windshield of a vehicle owned by Harry Myers.

Registration Dows

Fox also reported that while 546 new breeders were entered in the club in 1955, only 187 had been added in 1956 (through September). With the exception of Utah, all states in the western area had dropped in Jersey cattle registration during the past year.

"Milk Ring Testing" by which brucellosis tests are made on herd rather than individual cows and through milk rather than by blood tests, came in for considerable attention both during the morning and the afternoon sessions.

He explained that it would be more economical and that he believed "it would be fully as accurate as
