

Pro-Soviet Army Gags Syria's Press, Radio

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Dec. 2 (AP)— Syria's largely pro-Soviet army has press and radio under tight control and bars nearly all information from the West, reliable informants said today.

"They gave this picture of the situation in Syria: the Syrian government's declaration of martial law early in November that allowed the army to move in on newspapers and radio stations and to take command of most of Syria's police force.

Most Syrian military officers now are pro-Soviet because of their envy for the British and French and because Russia is providing Syria with cheap armaments.

Power Struggle

Their leader in the swing toward Moscow is Col. Abdul Hamid Sarraj, chief of army intelligence and an admirer of Egypt's President Nasser.

A struggle for power is being waged within the 10-man Cabinet of Premier Sabri Assal.

Assal's Nationalist party and the Socialist Resurrection party of Foreign Minister Salah Bitar are arrayed against the Popular party of Interior Minister Ahmed Qanbar.

Both the Nationalists and the Socialists are pro-Soviet.

Qanbar's anti-Communist Popularists have the largest number of deputies in Syria's Parliament and, with three ministers, the largest Cabinet representation. But the Popularists are split.

Deputies Split

One of their Cabinet members, Education Minister Abdel Wahhab Hammar, and a number of the Popularist deputies have gone over to the pro-Soviet faction.

Most observers in Damascus doubt Qanbar and the other anti-Communist Popularists in the Cabinet.

net, Agriculture Minister Rashad Jabri, will hold their posts much longer.

If Qanbar is forced out, the important Interior Ministry is expected to go to the Socialists, who also cover the post of Mohammed el Aish, minister without portfolio for labor and social affairs.

El Aish is a member of the Constitutional bloc, a loosely allied group of deputies whose political aims often are in conflict.

While the government is driving toward closer ties with the Soviet Union, it also is showing signs of seeking U. S. friendship. Diplomats in Damascus doubt the sincerity of the overtures to the United States. They consider it a maneuver to get U. S. assistance against Israel, France and Britain.

Terminal to Restaurant

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 2 (AP)— The Queen-Victoria Park railway station, once the busiest terminal in Ontario, will become a souvenir store and restaurant next year, Oscar McLeod, a contractor, has purchased the building from the New York Central Railroad.

Don't Neglect Slipping FALSE TEETH
