Tangle With Truck Bothers 'Superman'

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 20 — STARR REPORT: George Reeves, the amiable ex-stuntman and boxer who has been doubling in brass as Superman for the past six years, is still getting over the effects of discovering that he is not quite so invulnerable to earthly weapons as he might like to be. Just about a year ago his light sports car got caught between a couple rumbunctious trucks that "bounced me back and forth like a pingpong ball."

While he wasn't severely injured, he was badly shaken up, spent some time in the hospital and still can't be as active as he would like in his role as the all-seeing, all-conquering hero from another planet. "It loosened up a lot of my old fractures," George grins, "and I can't take falls yet. It's rather disappointing to the kids when I go on my personal appearance tours because about all I can do is just stand there and sign autographs and flex my muscles. But I should be back in good shape again when we start production on the next batch of films this summer."

George is excited these days about a new career, that of a singer, and has just gone to considerable expense to cut his own audition record, accompanying himself on the guitar. He laughs it off, but he's nonetheless serious about it.

He has interested himself in a relatively unknown disease, myasthenia gravis, which affects the nerve ends to the extent that the mere act of opening one's eyes becomes a major physical feat. "Whit Ellsworth's daughter has had it since birth," Reeves explains, Ellsworth being the producer of Superman, "and Whit's wife has formed a national foundation to fight this thing. When you see a six-year-old kid who can't move a muscle without expending the kind of effort you and I would need to climb a mountain, it does something to you. Most people have never heard of myasthenia gravis, but we hope to be able to correct that situation."

A bachelor, George lives alone in a comfortable little house up one of the Beverly Hills canyons, where his neighbors are Gig Young and Fess Parker. He has a miniature schnauzer, Sam, and a self-built concrete steam room out back to help him keep in shape. He also has a new sports car.

"They insisted that I go get a standard American car," he says, "so I did. But it was so big and fat that I kept side-swiping telephone poles every time I tried to park the thing. So I got rid of it and got me a Jaguar."

You can spot him almost any day, tootling happily down Sunset Blvd. He's the one who looks almost as big as his car. In fact, he is.

RADIO IS NOT YET dead, or at least not on KFI, Los Angeles. The NBC network affiliate, long noted for its independence, recently dropped an hour's worth of soap operas to accomodate the new Bill Goodwin show. Says the station manager: "We got 250 calls an hour from women all over Los Angeles, all screaming for the return of the soap operas." So the soaps are now back on the air and the Goodwin show is out in the cold locking for another time period. It's taken Gal Sunday some 18 years now to find out whether or not she can be happily married to a titled Englishman — and I guess it's going to take another 18 before she ever does find out. By that time, she'll be willing the problem to her grandchildren. heaven help them.

STARRDUST: Harry Ackerman, the former CBS top man out here, is busy as a hopped-up bee these days. No sooner had he launched plans for a film series for Joanne Gilbert than he turned around and signed Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy for their first series, a new one to be called "Favorite Son." The pilot will roll late next month and will be written by Barbara Hammer, prettiest script writer in the business. She used to turn out the "Dear Phoebe" scripts.

Many of NBC's spectaculars will be aimed at the children next season, a decision reached after the success of "Jack and the Beanstalk." Among the properties being considered are "Little Women," "Robinson Crusoe" and "Treasure Island." So what's the matter with "The Five Little Peppers" and "The Bobbsey Twins" or "The "Pied Piper of Hamlin"? . . . CBS has broken off its three-year contract with Judy Garland, which still has two years to run. Network claims Judy failed to perform. Judy claims she was never shown a script for the now-cancelled Feb. 25 show. Look now for the inevitable lawsuit.

SHORT SHOTS: Rod Serling, one of TV's top writers, has just been signed by CBS to do three "Playhouse 90" scripts for a total of $30,000 . . . Tennessee Ernie Ford is still a winner in the Neilson rating race. The last two reports gave him a 30.2 and 30.6 average rating to "Playhouse 90's" 22.4 and 22.2 . . . Here's food for thought. With the movie industry claiming TV has wrecked its box office, a look at the list of the top money-making movies of all time shows that 21 of the first 30 pictures were made during the last five years. And of the entire list of 168 top grossers, no less than 144 were made in the past ten years.

North-Central States Await New Polar Air

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Moist southern winds brought rain, snow and moderating temperatures to the eastern half of the nation Sunday. But the north-central states braced for a new surge of arctic air.

A broad belt of precipitation moved from the central states toward the Appalachians. Rain or drizzle fell from eastern Texas into Missouri and Louisiana, and it was mixed with snow between the western Great Lakes region and the Dakotas.

As the precipitation rolled eastward, last week's frigid air lost its grip and temperatures moderated to seasonal levels. The moist warming trend was expected to break into the coastal plain from Connecticut to North Carolina during the night.

Cross City, Fla., had an early Sunday morning reading of 40 degrees compared with 17 early Saturday. A scattering of subzero temperatures persisted in the Northeast where the mercury touched 16 below zero at Concord, N. H.

As the new arctic air mass moved southward from Alberta, temperatures were expected to drop through the Upper Mississippi Valley and the northern Rockies.

Carnegie Corp. Head Hails Man's 'Great Talent Hunt'

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (AP) — The president of Carnegie Corp. said today mankind is engaged in a "great talent hunt" that seeks humanitarians as well as scientists and engineers.

The comment by John W. Gardner was contained in the philanthropic foundation's annual report.

The report announced that the foundation made grants of more than seven million dollars during the last fiscal year. The major portion went to various projects in higher education.

Gardner said future demands for college-trained talent will not be limited to the much advertised needs for scientists and engineers, but will be felt in the social sciences and the humanities as well.

He directed attention to the "tremendous new responsibilities now facing U. S. colleges and universities and the great opportunities that lie ahead for their graduates."

Revolution in Attitudes

"We are witnessing a revolutin in society's attitude toward men and women of high ability and advanced training. For the first time in history, such men and women are very much in demand and on a very wide scale. . . . Today, as a result of far-reaching social and technological developments in our society, we are forced to search for talent and to use it effectively. Among the historic changes which have marked our era, this may in the long run prove to be one of the most profound.

"We are just beginning to understand that one of the distinguishing marks of a modern, complex society is the insatiable appetite for educated talent. It is not just technologists and scientists that we need, though they rank high in priority. We desperately need our gifted teachers, our professional men, our scholars, our critics and our seers. There is no present likelihood that the trend will reverse itself."

Gardner said the increased demand for educated talent has placed a wholly new emphasis upon the role of colleges and universities.

Colleges Are Decisive

"Virtually the total future leadership of our society — political, cultural, industrial, technical, professional, educational, and agricultural — is today being channeled through the colleges and universities," he said, adding:

"It follows that these institutions will play a far more powerful role on the American scene than anyone had anticipated. As the cradle of our national leadership, their vitality and excellence become a matter of critical importance."

The report said that of the $7,192,473 appropriated, the largest grant was one of one and a half million dollars to the Institute of International Education. The funds will be used over a 10-year period to administer the institute's student exchange program.

The report said the largest appropriation from the funds set aside for use in the British Commonwealth was $350,000 for the selection and purchase of books about the United States.

The Carnegie Corp. was founded by Andrew Carnegie for "the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States and of the British Dominions and colonies."

It has made grants totaling $261,165,964 since it was established in 1911.

Gasoline Profits Given to Refugee Fund

Shown "Filling 'er up for freedom" Sunday is Laszlo Panczel, (left), a refugee from Magyar, Hungary, while looking on is motorist Dwight Baker, 821 N. Cottage St., who wanted to do his bit. The scene is Robinson's Shell Service, 680 Center St., one of four area service stations which turned over Sunday profits to aid Hungarian refugee camps.

Snow Slows Gas Station Refugee Aid

Snow and cold Sunday slowed up a "Fill Up for Freedom" drive at four Salem area service stations. Profits to be turned over to Hungarian refugee camps were estimated roughly at about $150.

The four service stations, manned by five young Hungarians and volunteers from the Salem 20-30 Club, all reported business as "pretty slow."

Brown's Shell Service, 1115 Wallace Rd., reported taking in about $60 for the refugee fund. The other three stations reportedly raised between $30 and $40. They were Sears Shell Station, 12th and Mission Streets; Capitol Street Shell, Capitol and Market Streets; and Robinson's Shell Service, 680 Center St.

Young Hungarians who spent Sunday pumping gas to aid their fellow countrymen were two pairs of brothers, Joe and Alex Fejos, and Carl and Lasklo Panczel, and a fifth man, Bill Borok. All are recent arrivals in the Willamette Valley.

The Sunday program was directed by James Keys, Marion County Hungarian Relief chairman.

U.S. Okehs Arms Budget Of Japanese

TOKYO, Jan. 20 (AP)—The U. S. Embassy announced today the United States has agreed to Japan's 1957 fiscal year defense budget. A joint statement issued by the embassy and the Foreign Office did not disclose the budget figures agreed upon.

The defense budget proposed by Japan is reportedly equivalent to $391,834,700, with the main issue the proposed deferment of a 10,000 man army increase for one year until fiscal 1958.

The budget proposes $1,111,111 more than the current year's defense outlay. Under the Japanese plan, the navy would be expanded by 5,345 tons and the air force boosted by two wings.

America is involved in Japan's defense budget through provisions for joint defense under a mutual security pact.

Churchill Out, But His Family Going Strong

By EDIN SHANKE

LONDON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Sir Winston Churchill has retired from active politics but the family still is going strong. And the family of Britain's new prime minister, Harold Macmillan, is making political headway too.

Two of Churchill's sons-in-law and disciples—Duncan Sandys and Christopher Soames — hold key posts in the new Conservative administration. Macmillan appointed his son-in-law, Julian Amery, to the government and so drew fire from the opposition Labor party organ Daily Herald. The Herald called the appointment "astounding."

All three sons-in-law were named to responsible — and challenging — posts.

Macmillan chose the 49-year-old Sandys as defense minister. It is a key job in the new administration's developing policy, which is aimed at cutting defense spending and recasting Britain's defense setup in line with the age of atomic weapons. He is going to Washington Jan. 28 to talk with U.S. officials about just this problem.

Reputation for Toughness

Cutting defense costs has confounded a parade of defense ministers in the last two or three years. But Sandys, bringing a reputation for toughness, stubbornness and methodical thoroughness to the job, is likely to find stout allies in two other "in-law" appointees to the service departments.

Soames, 36, is parliamentary and financial secretary at the Admiralty. Amery, 37, stepped into his first ministerial appointment as parliamentary and financial secretary to the War Office. Both men, though only junior ministers, will help to shape defense policy and put the coming defense cuts into effect.

For some years after his marriage to Churchill's eldest daughter Diana, Sandys ran the danger of becoming regarded merely as "Mr. Churchill's son-in-law."

As late as 1948, Sandys still was comparatively unknown to the British public — but he was working hard behind the scenes pushing the then novel idea of a "united Europe" movement. It eventually blossomed into the European Assembly and Council of Europe at Strasbourg.

When Churchill made his post war comeback as prime minister in 1951, he appointed Sandys minister of supply. Sandys' political star has been rising ever since.

Churchill's Secretary

The bulky, well-dressed figure of Soames came on the political scene later than Sandys. Soames married Mary Churchill in 1947 and entered Parliament on his first try three years later. During the years that Churchill was prime minister from 1952 to 1955, Soames was almost constantly at his side as his parliamentary private secretary. Now, with Churchill retired from political life, the Soames family lives on Churchill's country estate, Chartwell, near Westerham, Kent.

The Daily Herald quickly criticized the Prime Minister for appointing son-in-law Amery to the War Office. Amery "has done nothing to prove his ability or work his passage into high office," the newspaper said.

Amery, Eton and Oxford educated, is a tough, outspoken figure on the extreme right of the Conservative party. His late father, Leopold, ranked among the leading imperialists of the Conservative party.

Amery married Catherine MacMillan in 1950, the same year he entered Parliament. He soon became a leader of the so-called "Suez group," rank-and-file Conservatives who opposed British withdrawal from the Suez Canal defense zone. He opposed just as strenuously the Eden government's decision to halt armed intervention in Egypt at the height of the Suez crisis last November.

Another member of the Macmillan family — 35-year-old son Maurice — also has launched on a political career. He was elected to Parliament in 1955.

Stork Rumor Hits Monaco After Salute

MONTE CARLO, Monaco, Jan. 20 (AP)—There was a 21-gun salute down at Cannes today for the Sultan of Morocco. Since that is to be the local signal for the birth of a daughter to Princess Grace, the expected uproar developed.

The cannonading couldn't be heard here, but someone who heard about it spread the news and there was some fine helter-skelter scurrying by reporters for a while. If the baby is a boy the salute will be 101 guns.

Prince Rainier stuck close to home, with the advent of his first-born imminent, and watched a soccer match from a balcony of the palace. Princess Grace sat inside knitting.

A palace spokesman conceded under questioning that doctors' predictions that the baby would arrive between today and Jan. 25 might be conservative. But in gambling-conscious Monte Carlo, the betting tonight was even money that the baby would be here within three days.

Gifts and letters from well-wishers poured into the palace. An autographed photograph came from President Eisenhower. An anonymous donor in the United States sent a mink toothbrush—"for people who have everything."

Man Charged With Carrying Weapon

A charge of carrying a concealed weapon was brought by city police Saturday night against Walter A. Nelson, 24, of 896 N. Commercial St., after they discovered a long machete under his belt, officers said.

Two officers arrested Nelson at 9:35 p.m. on a drunkenness charge at D and Commercial Streets prior to the second charge.

Globe-Circling Planes 'Could Have Gone on'

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—The commander of one of the three B52s that flew 24,000 miles nonstop around the world last week said today the big bombers could "have kept right on going" if necessary.

Lt. Col. James H. Morris, of San Antonio, Tex., said he was convinced that the range of the B52s, refueled in flight, is limited only by the physical capabilities of the men who fly them.

Morris and seven of the other crew aboard the lead plane "Lucky Lady III" talked to newsmen today during a visit to Washington to take part in tomorrow's inaugural parade. They will ride a float showing a huge globe with a model B52 circling it.
