

Further Study Due For Development Plan in East Salem

Further study on a proposed development project in East Salem was voted by the Salem City Planning Commission at its meeting Tuesday night.

Precision Builders Inc. had requested a rear yard setback variance for a five-unit court apartment it intends to construct at the southwest corner of Simpson and 24th streets.

It was pointed out at the Commission meeting that the proximity of a railroad right-of-way there cut off some of the lots from access to a street. The Commission tabled the request for further study.

A request from Westwood Properties cabinetmakers for possible rezoning of the north portion of the property at the former Reinhold and Lewis Plant at 460 S. 21st St. was referred to the zone change committee for study and a report.

The property is now zoned as residential. The request is to change the zone so that the business can expand in that direction.

City Manager Kent Mathewson reported that the Central Willamette Valley Planning Council, an organization composed of several city, school and county units, was making "good progress" toward complete organization.

Recognition Of Red China Wins Support

A small group of Salem residents who attended the fifth meeting of the current Great Decisions study program voted Tuesday night for the United States to recognize Peiping.

The group of 18 members attended a public forum on "Should the U. S. Deal with Red China," held in Willamette University Library.

Allan Berg was discussion chairman and Dr. James Hyatt was moderator, with Terry Jew, a Chinese student at Willamette who left China in 1951, as guest speaker.

Seven members voted that the U. S. should withdraw all opposition to a U. N. seat for Peiping, and nine said the U. S. should recognize Peiping because "we can deal with all Far East political problems more easily if we have diplomatic relations with Peiping."

Eight members voted that the U. S. should negotiate with Red China for a Far East settlement on all outstanding issues and six voted that the U. S. should withdraw recognition from the Kuomintang government and support Taiwanese independence from both the Kuomintang and Communist regimes.

Few Ports Operate In East

NEW YORK, Feb. 12—Only a few ports still operated from Maine to Virginia late tonight as dock workers of the International Longshoremen's Assn. struck in the East.

The New England ports of Boston, Portland, Maine and Providence hung back for the time being. But virtually all others went along with the strike order.

Passenger ships were already diverting from New York, seeking a strike-safe haven. The Queen Elizabeth, world's largest liner, prepared to put in at Newfoundland rather than come on to New York, where she is due Thursday.

It was one of the most dramatic climaxes in the history of New York waterfront negotiations.

The talks began last Aug. 1 when the ILLA presented its demands. They were interrupted first in October when the union took time out to defeat an AFL-CIO dock union rival in a National Labor Relations bargaining election.

Negotiations were resumed but the deadlock persisted. So on Nov. 15, the ILLA struck the docks from Maine to Texas. Some 40,000 longshoremen were involved.

The strike cost shippers and dependent businesses a million dollars a day before President Eisenhower intervened under the Taft-Hartley law, for the nation's welfare.

A Taft-Hartley injunction interrupted the strike for 10 days on Nov. 24. Later, the cooling off period was extended to 90 days—which delayed any resumption of the strike until today.

To Retire

Dwight E. Wolf of Salem will retire from Navy after 22 years of service.

Salem Man to End 22 Years In U.S. Navy

Returning to Salem soon from Rainier, Md., after 22 years in the Navy will be Dwight E. Wolf, who is 40, joining the Navy in 1934, shortly after coming to Salem from Watertown, S. D., with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eugene Wolf, 3170 Willamette Drive.

During the past two years, Wolf was Chief Instructor at the Telem School, Bainbridge. Previously, he was stationed on the battleship California and communication stations in Balboa, Washington, D. C., Norfolk, Va., and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Motoring from Maryland, he is expected to arrive in Salem sometime next week. He will be preceded by his wife and two children who are arriving later this week. He has no definite plans for the future, his parents said.

Fire Extinguished

A 9-year-old Salem boy told city police Tuesday evening that he and another lad had started a fire in an evergreen tree at 535 S. 17th St. The Salem Fire department was called out to extinguish the fire, police said.

Young Singer Gives Remarkable Concert

By MAXINE BUREN
Statesman Music Editor
Cesare Siepi, a young man with a fine voice, sang a remarkable program last night at North Salem High School. The shows, one of the Community Concert Series, was satisfying both in quality and substance.

Siepi sings confidently in a voice rich, sonorous and fluent. His is a bass voice of unusual versatility. And I found the basso a pleasant change from the more usual tenor, though I have no fault to find with tenors.

The man and his voice were satisfying, but it was his selection of program that fascinated me. It should have pleased all listeners, for it ran through almost every classification that is offered in the repertoire of good music. Yet all was worthy of the singer's artistry.

There were songs of prayer, of happiness and sorrow; songs of love and hate. Some were sung in Italian, French, German, Russian and English. There were serenades, arias and ballads.

Handel, Bach, Mozart, Tchaikovsky and some moderns were included. The man even sang Mephisto's serenades from two Fausts, Berlioz and Gounod. Starting with a song prayer he concluded with an aria, after running through the moderns, and touching on three very melodious contemporary songs in English.

And all this with encores, and the concert was over early. Thus ended an evening of fine music, sung by a man with great talent, before an audience well-pleased. One could ask for nothing more.

Ways to Aid Retardation Explained

Mrs. Lillian Moss, manager of Baby Louise Haven and Haven School, spoke Tuesday night on "Mental Retardation" before some 25 members attending a meeting of the Salem Association of Retarded Children in South Salem's Little Theater.

Mrs. Moss gave a brief history of the school and stressed the training students received so that they may be accepted by the public. She said the children are taught cleanliness and how to do a job through instruction.

Children enrolled in the nursery class receive instruction in cooperation, discipline and how to follow through on a given task or job. Currently there are 31 children enrolled in the school which employs three teachers.

The sixth and final meeting of the current series will be held Tuesday night in the South Salem Little Theater. The meeting will consist of a panel made up of three parents and a moderator.

Train Derails; Seven Injured In Alabama

CULLMAN, Ala., Feb. 12—Four coaches of a Louisville & Nashville passenger train derailed tonight and seven persons were injured.

The Pan-American struck a door which apparently had fallen from a freight car, State Patrol Sgt. W. B. Little said. The derailed train was southbound from Cincinnati to New Orleans.

The officer said the freight car door became entangled in the wheels of the lead cars and jammed against a switch, breaking it and derailing the four coaches. None of them overturned.

The accident happened at Garden City, Ala., about 12 miles south of Cullman.

Modern GOP Said Based On Lincoln

PORTLAND, Feb. 12—President Eisenhower's modern Republicanism is based on the principles of Lincoln, Secy. of State Mark Hatfield told a Lincoln Day audience here today.

"Gettysburg in 1860 might well become the burial ground of Eisenhower's modern Republicanism unless youth is enlisted, a program of action is evolved, and humanitarian concepts govern those actions," Hatfield said.

"The president from Illinois died, but his party lived. The present danger of presidential assassination lies not in the man himself but the assassination of those things for which he stands."

"Materialism or business or property cannot serve as a foundation for a democracy, but the character of individuals and the maintenance of a free society are the twin pillars which Lincoln exemplified."

Sun Operates Flashlight

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—Developers of a sun-powered flashlight put it on display today and said it "should run for 10 years without changing the battery."

The flashlight was one of various solar-powered devices demonstrated by officials of Hoffman Electronics Corp., Los Angeles. Most of them are still in the developmental stage.

Hoffman representatives said the flashlight, costing about $25, is to be put through evaluation trials by the Navy and the Army Signal Corps.

It converts solar energy to electricity by means of eight solar cells made of silicon. These charge two storage batteries made of a nickel and cadmium combination. Five hours of charging in sunlight were said to be enough to allow one hour of continuous use.

The muskrat is not a rat. He is an amphibious rodent and his legal name is "musquash."

Mother, Child Thrown From Fiery Building

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 12—A 39-year-old man threw his unconscious pregnant daughter and his small grandson from the window of their burning third floor apartment today before leaping to safety himself.

Two men, standing below, caught Mrs. Rose Trivette, 21, and her son, Philip, 2, in their arms. They also broke the fall for Arnie Turbyfill, the grandfather. Firemen arrived after Turbyfill jumped.

Neither Mrs. Trivette nor Philip was hurt, but Turbyfill was taken to Receiving Hospital with undiagnosed back injuries and cuts and bruises.

Flames, which started apparently from a match in the wastebasket of a basement apartment, drove 26 persons from the brick building. No one was killed, but damage was extensive.

Turbyfill said that he went to the window after the doorway was blocked by smoke. His daughter had fainted and he had to drag her through the smoke-filled room after he had thrown the child to safety.

Tigard Tot Faces Heart Operation

TIGARD, Feb. 12—Four-year-old Carol Ann Watson will leave by airliner Friday for Minneapolis to undergo hazardous heart surgery.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Watson of Tigard, said they had been advised the girl might not live more than two years without the operation.

The operation will be performed at the University of Minnesota's crippled children's hospital.

The mother will accompany the girl. All expenses are being borne by funds available through the University of Oregon and the Minnesota crippled children's hospital.

Architect Drawings Due Soon for Pool at YWCA

Preliminary architect's drawings for the swimming pool to which Salem's YWCA board of directors gave its support Tuesday night will shortly be secured, Mrs. Donald Rasmussen, board president, said.

She stated preference will be given to a local architect and added that funds will soon be made available for initial planning of the project.

Original plans for the YWCA building on State Street built in 1953 included a pool, but it was deemed advisable to delay the project until a later date. However, Mrs. Rasmussen said, the present building does include showers and locker space and was designed so that the addition of a pool wing would not require major structural change.

Once the pool is built, men's locker rooms in the present building would have to be constructed, in addition to other space being altered to meet the demands the pool would impose.

Named Chairman
Dr. Maynard Shiffer was named chairman of the facilities committee. He will be assisted by Mrs. A. D. Woodmansee, W. R.

Boy Survives 15 Minutes in Refrigerator

ALBIA, Iowa, Feb. 12—Kim Thomas, 3, spent 15 frightening minutes inside an electric refrigerator today before his mother found him, apparently without ill effects.

His mother, Mrs. John Thomas, said Kim was clad only in his underwear.

Harvard Sets Goal

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 12—Harvard President Nathan M. Pusey announced today that $2 million dollars will be sought for the college in the next three years and said it is "the largest sum ever asked of private means for the support of undergraduate education."

Senators Refuse To Bisect Ike's Mideast Policy

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—A joint Senate committee refused today to cut President Eisenhower's Middle East resolution in half and sidetrack his 200 million dollar foreign aid program for the area. It was an important victory for the administration and pointed to eventual passage of the resolution in a form acceptable to Eisenhower.

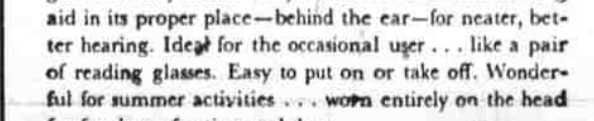

The Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees, meeting in a joint closed session, was reported to have voted 17-11 against limiting the resolution to one section authorizing the President to employ U.S. armed forces in the Middle East if necessary to stem Communist aggression.
