Actual cost of construction of the large pipe from Stayton and new filter facilities on Stayton island must be considerably less than this, however, as the total bond issue must also pay for such incidental costs as right-of-way and legal, engineering and inspection fees.

City Mgr. Kent Mathewson said Wednesday he had no indication how many bids would be received in the meeting at 2 p.m. today in his office in City Hall.

The 233 members of Salem's two Guard units, companies "B" and "D," will conduct training programs during the day. Refreshments will be served.

Men who join the Guard prior to April 1 will not be required to take the six-months active duty training, which will be in effect after that date.

Damage Suit Claim Increased

The amount sought in a damage suit brought last December against three Salem area men and a bank was boosted to over a half million dollars in an amended complaint filed in Marion County Circuit Court Wednesday.

Jack Shoemaker, a former Salem resident, filed the original suit for $251,500 against Arnold Selnes, Turner, and Jens Svith and C. Carroll Meeks, as individuals and as agents of the U.S. National Bank of Portland.

He charged the defendants had misrepresented facts in charging him with embezzlement by bailee in converting 1,469 turkeys to his own use. Shoemaker was brought to trial on the embezzlement charge in June, 1955, and acquitted by a Marion County jury.

In the amended complaint Wednesday, Shoemaker added a second cause of action in charging defamation of character through a statement allegedly made by Turner in March, 1955, concerning the alleged embezzlement.

He now seeks $125,000 for alleged injury to his business and character by the alleged "malicious prosecution" of the embezzlement charge and a second $125,000 for punitive damages on that count.

Shoemaker also asks $250,000 in general and punitive damages for the alleged defamation of character. The complaint asks an additional $1,500 to cover cost of Shoemaker's legal defense in the 1955 trial.

Office Labeled Unhealthy, Overcrowded

One of the areas of the State Office Building which Secretary of State Mark Hatfield Monday labeled "unhealthy" because of overcrowding and poor ventilation was this basement office occupied by state tax workers. Labor Group Accuses City Workers of 'Second Jobs'

Rumbles of civil service dismissals were heard Wednesday during a meeting of the Salem Civil Service Commission at the City Hall.

Two complaints were lodged by the Salem Trades and Labor Council with the Salem Civil Service Commission Wednesday charging seven members of the Salem Fire Department and a police officer with violating the Civil Service code.

In the first complaint reported to the commission firemen Peter F. McCaffery and Dene D. Ray were charged with being employed by a local radio and television concern in addition to their firefighting jobs.

In the second complaint Salem firemen G. A. Nollinger, Ray I. Tompkins, Dick L. Craven, Ronald Ruck, Gerald Hall, and Salem patrolman LaVerne Jenness, were alleged to be involving in building houses for monetary gain under the supervision of Hall.

The commission decided to proceed with examinations and hearings on the complaints. No positive action was taken pending further investigation and discussion.

In other business the commission referred the certification of the recent fire and police department eligibility examinations until such time as the information of all the applicants is complete. Certification is expected to come not later than March 1, the commission stated.

The appointment of Allen G. Tompkins as a regular member of the Salem fire department as of last Jan. 1, and the appointments of Benjamin Bartell and fire inspector Kenneth L. Burnett to ranks of captain were reported.

Bartell was appointed to fill the position vacated by the retirement of Walter D. Edwards and Burnett was appointed on a temporary basis and also will be retained as inspector.

The resignation of Cecil Dill from the fire department, effective March 1, was accepted.

Clarification of a previously misunderstood section of the civil service laws involving the rank of names on the police and fire department eligibility list was read. The report, issued by the city attorney's office stated that rank on the list is determined by the excellence of the applicant's examination grade regardless of the time the examination was taken.

State Building Probe Asked By Hatfield

Several state agencies have been requested to investigate "unhealthy" working conditions in the basement of the old state office building.

Secretary of State Mark Hatfield this week asked the state Board of Health, the labor commissioner and the state fire marshal to make an inspection of the building and to make recommendations for improvements.

Hatfield said he questioned whether the basement working conditions would meet basic sanitation and safety regulations for private industry. The state, he said, should meet the same requirements for its employees.

The structure, was built in the 1930's. A year ago repairs were made to the building, located at Court and 12th streets, when the basement ceiling threatened to collapse.

Major agency occupying the space is the state Civil Defense Agency.

Paul Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ward, 685 N. 20th St., will be one of two students representing the University of Oregon speech department at the Pacific Forensic speech tournament in Arizona March 25-27.

City to Open Bids Today on Water Project

Bids for construction of facilities to double Salem's water supply will be opened this afternoon.

Chances are, however, that a contract will not be awarded until after the City Council has seen the bond bids to be opened March 5.

The city, maneuvering for the largest bond issue in its history, needs construction bids to show bond buyers that the job can be done at a reasonable price, but it needs the bond bids before it can award a contract with any assurance of paying for it on schedule.

The $3,750,000 bond issue to be paid from water revenue was authorized by Salem residents in a popular vote in the primary elections last spring.

Actual cost of construction of the large pipe from Stayton and new filter facilities on Stayton island must be considerably less than this, however, as the total bond issue must also pay for such incidental costs as right-of-way and legal, engineering and inspection fees.

City Mgr. Kent Mathewson said Wednesday he had no indication how many bids would be received in the meeting at 2 p.m. today in his office in City Hall.

Guard Plans Open House For Sunday

An "open house," when the public may view weapons and training programs at the Salem downtown Armory, will be held Sunday by the Salem National Guard units.

The open house, from 1 to 5 p.m. is part of the local observance of "National Guard Muster Days." This is a nation-wide recruiting program to enlist new members.

On display at the armory Sunday will be machine guns, mortars and a 105 mm artillery rifle mounted on a jeep. Small arms and other weapons also will be displayed and demonstrated.

The 233 members of Salem's two Guard units, companies "B" and "D," will conduct training programs during the day. Refreshments will be served.

Men who join the Guard prior to April 1 will not be required to take the six-months active duty training, which will be in effect after that date.

Third Man Facing Count

A third Portland man is being held on larceny charges growing out of the theft of pipe and other equipment from the Willamette Drilling Company near Brooks in February, the Marion County Sheriff's office reported Wednesday.

Dave Buchanan, 37, Portland, was arrested in Salem when he attempted to visit Roosevelt Jenkins and Van Glessen, both of Portland, who are being held in the Marion County jail on the same charge, Sheriff Denver Young said.

Arraignment was continued until Monday in Marion County District Court Wednesday when Buchanan asked for time to consult an attorney. Bail was set at $1,000.

Preliminary hearings for Jenkins and Glessen are scheduled today in district court.
