Big Jim Elkins, former boss of Portland's underworld, has testi-fied he was told by a gambling associate that Schrunk accepted a $500 bribe to call off a gambling raid in 1955, when Schrunk was Multnomah County sheriff. Five other witnesses have corroborated narts of his story parts of his story. Lie Detector Test

But Schrunk swore today he never accepted the hribe. He has agreed to undergo a lie detector test in an attempt to convince the committee he's telling the truth.

The senators are making a nationwide inquiry into alleged rack-eteering in labor unions and industry. For the past two weeks they have been investigating alleged links between the powerful Tearn-sters Union and racketeers in Port-land and Seattle and Spokane,

Another witness today was Clyde Crosby, the $16,800-a-year interna-tional organizer for the Teamsters Union in Oregon.

Crosby testified Elkins once tried to extort $10,000 from him. He said the gambler told him that if be paid up he could have some tape recordings of conversations which Elkins represented as being detrimental to Crosby. Played Recordings
