

Jury Hears of Secrets Given to Hoffa for Cash

WASHINGTON, June 27 (AP) — The James R. Hoffa trial jury heard a cloak-and-dagger story today of a $2,000 wad of bills being passed to an informant on a busy Washington traffic circle in exchange for Senate Rackets Committee data on Teamsters Union President Dave Beck.

Lawyer-investigator John Gye Cheasty said the transaction occurred under FBI surveillance, and he said the information he slipped Hoffa was screened in advance by staff members of the Senate group Hoffa is vice president of the Teamsters Union.

Cheasty is the government's key witness in the bribery-conspiracy trial of Hoffa, who is accused of hiring Cheasty to get a job with the committee and feed its secrets back to Hoffa. Cheasty said he took the assignment but told authorities what he was doing.

Data on Shefferman

Testifying for the fourth day, Cheasty said the committee data he handed Hoffa showed that Nathan Shefferman, Chicago labor-management consultant, made some $80,000 in purchases for Beck out of Teamsters' Union funds.

The indictment against Hoffa says that when he learned about this he whistled and said: "Beck's goose is cooked."

Hoffa has been the No. 1 candidate to succeed Beck as president of the union. Beck faces ouster for his refusal to answer committee charges that he stole some $300,000 from the Teamsters. Hoffa is being tried with Hyman L. Fischbach, Miami Attorney named by Cheasty as the contact man between himself and Hoffa.

Day of Alleged Payoff

Edward P. Troxell, government prosecutor, devoted the entire morning session to questioning Cheasty about events of March 12, the day of the alleged $2,000 payoff.

Cheasty said every step of the way FBI agents whom he had tipped off in advance saw what happened.

He said he rode to a Du Pont Circle rendezvous with Hoffa in a cab driven by an FBI agent Ray Morrison, during the afternoon rush hour.

Paid Off Cab Driver

The witness said he picked up Hoffa in front of Hoffa's hotel, rode half way around the circle, paid off the cab and walked a short distance farther.

At that point, Cheasty said he took an envelope containing the Beck material from a newspaper and gave it to Hoffa.

Hoffa took the papers and said, "I've got a couple of thousand for you; do you want it now?" Cheasty said:

"I said, 'Nobody ever says no to money.'"

Shoved It in Pocket

A fast handshake followed and in it "was a wad of bills fastened by a rubber band I shoved in my overcoat pocket."

Cheasty said Robert F. Kennedy, the committee's accountant, selected the documents from the Dave Beck file.

So careful were the FBI agents, Cheasty said, that twice during the day before he met Hoffa they made him strip in his hotel room to make inventories of his clothing and possessions.

Cheasty testified previously that Hoffa promised him a total of $18,000 to spy on the committee.

Wildlife Education Slated for Camps

PORTLAND, June 27 (AP) — Education in Oregon's animal and bird life will be given at 47 youth camping sites around the state this summer, the state Game Commission said Wednesday.
