Polish Girl Finds U.S. a Wonderland

Polish Girl Rejoins Mother She Hadn't Seen in Years

By MOE RAISER

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP)—Renata Tausch, a 17-year-old girl transplanted from Communist Poland, finds life in her new country hard to believe.

Her hair was long and straggling when she lived in Drobslawitze. Visiting a beauty parlor here, she almost fainted from excitement while her hair was cut, washed and set.

In Poland she had to carry water from the lake to a farm house, and bathing was infrequent. In America the bathroom of her modern residence fascinates her.

Renata came to Livermore last fall, to rejoin her mother, Mrs. Stephanie Rock, whom she had not seen in 15 years.

They were separated in 1943 when her mother was forced to leave Silesia. She sent Renata to live with her grandparents in Drobslawitze.

After the war Renata's mother became a civilian employe of the USAF in Munich, met and married M. Sgt. Carvis W. Rock.

He was transferred to Parks Air Force Base and established a home in nearby Livermore.

The Rocks wanted to bring Renata to this country and after miles of red tape were untangled the girl was on her way. To make the journey to America possible, Renata's grandmother sold a choice pig for 400 zlotys or about $100 at the present rate of exchange.

Arrives After Delays

After many delays, the girl arrived in San Francisco. The Rocks welcomed Renata with hugs and kisses. At her new home she met her 2½-year-old half-brother, Johnny. Neighbors had prepared a surprise buffet supper for the family.

"Renata was astounded at the amount of food," Mrs. Rock says. "In Poland bread was hard to find even if one could afford it.

"She asked if her dad was in the grocery business after she had inspected our kitchen shelves."

The girl says she once saw an orange in Poland, but had never peeled one. Bananas were unknown. Automobiles and airplanes were strange mechanical devices.

Her stepfather took her to the local airport and told her the small planes were privately owned.

"Is it possible for just anyone to ride in just any plane without permission of the officials?" she asked in amazement.

To prove they could, M. Sgt. Lumon Hicks of the Parks AFB Aero Club took Renata and her mother for a short flight. The girl's joy was tremendous.

Renata at first was skeptical about going to school. She says that in Poland she became a farm laborer when she was 14 and had to quit school.

"No one, except those boys chosen by the political officers were allowed to progress past the seventh grade," she explained.

But now Livermore High School is one more wonder to Renata.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Should the wedding guests wait until the bridal party dances first at the reception, or may every one join them on the dance floor and not wait for them to dance first?

A. If the bridal couple is still receiving, the guests are expected to dance. Sometimes, however, the orchestra does not play until the bride and groom are ready to dance, and in this case they may dance once around the floor before the guests join in.

Q. If a man and girl are dining in a restaurant where there is dancing, and another man comes to the table and asks her to dance, is it proper for her to accept?

A. She should ask her escort, "Do you mind if I dance with Bill?" If he says he doesn't mind, she may dance with him a very short while, then return to her escort.

Q. When one has an illness in the family, and a friend says, "I am sorry," what should one's response be?

A. "Thank you" is sufficient.

Acheson Hits Eisenhower Leadership

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Dean Acheson today opposed high level talks with the Russians at this time. He also accused President Eisenhower of failing to match "ringing words" with deeds of leadership.

Acheson, a frequent Republican target while secretary of state under President Truman, held a news conference. Its purpose was to discuss a series of foreign policy pamphlets being drafted by the Democratic party's Foreign policy Advisory Committee, of which Acheson is chairman.

"It seems to all of us on the committee that this administration's inaction, the substitution of words for acts, has now brought us very close to a serious situation," Acheson said.

He said the administration pictures Eisenhower as "the great white father" and replies to all criticisms by saying "leave it to Eisenhower."

"It now is quite clear that leaving things to this administration means they don't get done," Acheson said.

U.S. Indonesian Ambassador to Get New Assignment

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—The State Department announced today U.S. ambassador John M. Allison is leaving his post in Indonesia Jan. 29 and is returning here for consultations and reassignment.

Press officer Lincoln White said in a statement the diplomatic shuffle was part of an interrelated series of diplomatic transfers.

Allison, a career diplomat, has been criticized in some quarters for allegedly failing to report fully on recent political developments in Indonesia. The State Department, however, has termed his reporting more than satisfactory.

Young Star Likes Offbeat TV Roles

By EVE STARR

STARR REPORT: Carolyn Jones is a 24-year-old native blonde gone brunette who gives every indication of being one of Hollywood's more interesting and exciting young stars. She is frank, outspoken and not a little on the pixie side.

Married four and a half years to western writer Aaron Spelling, she just might get an Oscar for her performance in "Bachelor Party," and will soon be coming up in "Marjorie Morningstar." In TV, she likes to take offbeat roles and doesn't insist that they be the biggest part in the show.

Last week she took on the role of Julie in "The Last Man" on "Playhouse 90," a story written by her husband. Julie is a character Hollywood has done many, many times before—the tramp with the heart of gold who finally finds the right man—but Carolyn gave the role a good dose of her own unique talent and made Julie look and act like a human being instead of a stereotype.

What I still can't understand about "The Last Man" is how such intelligent men as Spelling, producer Marty Manulis and director John Frankenheimer could let Sterling Hayden say a line like "Louse it up" not once but twice, and this in 1871. And twice they had a character asking for Scotch at an 1871 western saloon.

Carolyn brings a lift to every show during rehearsals, wearing her Capri pants and Italian sweaters that she insists on sticking to as her working clothes. She also does animal imitations, a talent she developed for a Texas radio station some years ago, and can fill a rehearsal hall with an assortment of shrieks and squawks that would bring a zoo keeper running.

Carolyn is a graduate of the famed Pasadena Playhouse, along with such other luminaries as Lloyd Nolan, Eleanor Parker, Victor Jory, Robert Preston, Judith Evelyn and a flock of others. She announced her intention of going to Pasadena while still a slip of a girl in her native Texas, and her father, humoring a child's whim, said it would be fine with him when the time came. The time came and Carolyn held her startled father to his promise.

She was a blonde in those days and was still a blonde, getting nowhere in particular, when the "Bachelor Party" role called for a brunette. With nothing to lose, she dyed her hair and plunged into the part.

She's been a brunette ever since and jokingly claims it's not your talent that counts, but the color of your hair.

PLANS FOR THE FIRST commercial-less Oscar telecast, set for March 26, are beginning to shape up, with NBC's Alan Handley (the producer-director-writer who turned Dinah Shore into a TV star) to direct the show and the movie industry's outspokenly anti-TV producer, Jerry Wald, to serve as producer. Now there's a man who is going to learn a thing or two in the next couple of months!

Additionally, Danny Kaye has agreed to do a specialty number, Walt Disney will produce a four-minute cartoon history of the movie industry and Clark Gable will make his TV bow as a guest.

Actually, it will be Gable's second appearance on TV, but very few people remember or even now about his first. KTLA had a special TV newsreel show every week about seven years ago and its cameras caught Gable at the funeral of a Hollywood dignitary.

JACK WEBB, still at the mercy of a contented sponsor loaded with options, may have to continue "Dragnet" into 1959 whether he likes it or not, and it's no particular secret that he doesn't lie ticular secret that he doesn't like it a bit—at least not from the act-

He's been doing Sergeant Friday for seven years now and he's thoroughly tired of it. Sponsor willing, he'd like to let Ben Alexander take over as the star of the show, with Webb confining himself to producing and directing.

It's my guess, however, that the sponsor has been buying Webb all these years and will want to continue buying him. What Jack could do, of course, would be to have Sergeant Friday run over by a truck, thus neatly eliminating him from the series. It's been done before.

Husband's Phone Calls Annoy Wife

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: We have a problem to put before you, and your answer will settle it once and for all. My husband is honest and faithful and has nothing to hide.

He's an insurance adjuster and sometimes he gets calls from women during the evening, at home. I am NOT jealous nor am I nosey. Yet I think, as his wife, I have a right to know who is calling.

Whenever I ask him who is on the phone he replies, 'What difference does it make. You don't know her anyway." Then he clams up for the evening.

Tell me, Ann, since he has nothing to hide, why does he take on this secretive attitude which only leads to a bad feeling?—MADAME Q.

Chances are, if you didn't ask your husband who was on the phone, he'd volunteer the information. The fact that you make an issue of it by probing, probably gets his back up.

In a good marriage there are no "secrets," but merely because people are related doesn't give them the right to invade each other's privacy. Don't let your childish curiosity turn you into a meddlesome nag. Since these calls are strictly business, what difference does it make if it's Mrs. Dinkelspiel or Mrs. Volkswagen?

Dear Ann: I have a similar problem to that of "Thinking Mother." This woman wanted to know if she should tell her child that he was born out of wedlock. I want to know if (and how) to tell my children that I was once a patient in a mental hospital.

This has been weighing heavily on my mind because I know of the stigma attached to mental illness. It's almost the same as being in a TB Sanitarium or serving time in prison. It's a shame that such feelings should exist in our enlightened generation but that's the way it is.

My husband says perhaps it would be best not to mention it at all. But I'm afraid if I don't tell them, someone else will. Please advise me.—CONCERNED.

You wouldn't be ashamed to tell your children that you broke your leg, would you? Well, a mental breakdown should be handled the same way. Discuss it openly, without a hint of shame or secrecy, because it is a sickness and not a disgrace.

When you, equate mental illness with a child born out of wedlock, and a prison term with tuberculosis, it indicates you need educating badly. In order to contribute to an "enlightened generation" you must become enlightened yourself.

Have a talk with your doctor and ask him to recommend reading material. Join the Mental Health Society and become active in the group. When you are relaxed about the subject and feel that there is NO stigma attached to mental illness, your children will then adopt the same healthy attitude.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper and enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.)
