Dried Fruits Replace Fresh in Dessert, Jam

By MAXINE BUREN
Statesman Woman's Editor

Almost as sure to come in February as Valentine's Day, is a realization that the canning shelves look awfully empty and that there are still several months ahead when fruits, jellies and jams will be used but not replenished.

There are ways to help out this situation as most good homemakers have found through the years, but perhaps a few reminders and new ideas may be very welcome, even to the most experienced in such culinary situations.

Many folks turn to dried fruits for bolstering up the jam and jelly supply and to supplement fresh and canned fruit at mealtime. One of my favorite ways to use dried fruits as a breakfast fruit is to cook an assortment together, adding some raisins to peaches, apricots, apples, pears and spices. With a little sweetening this is delicious, especially when served warm. Sometimes you can find an assortment packaged together.

Dried peaches make excellent pie, and add a good deal of interest to mid-winter menus, which often need a shot in the arm in February.

Winter Peach Pie

2 1/2 cups cooked dried peaches
1 cup peach juice
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons cold water
2 tablespoons butter
Pastry for crusts

Combine strips of the peaches with other ingredients, using water in which they were cooked. Bring to a boil, stir and cook 3 minutes. Pour into 8-inch pastry shell, cover top with pastry strips and bake in a 450 degree oven for 25 minutes. This serves 6 to 8 persons. Apricots make good spiced marmalade for winter spreads. The pineapple in this recipe adds even more goodness.

Spiced Apricot Marmalade

2 1/2 cups uncooked dried apricots
1 cup crushed pineapple
1/2 cup light corn syrup
2 cups sugar
1 cup water
1 1/4-inch stick cinnamon

Cut fruit into strips, combine with other ingredients and cook until rather thick, but watch it carefully as it scorches easily when beginning to thicken. When cook, pour into sterilized jars and seal with paraffin. Makes 3 pints.

If preferred, put it into a shallow casserole and bake in a 375 degree oven for 2 hours. This way it takes less watching, though it needs an occasional stirring.

Prune whip is an old favorite, but apricots make an equally good dessert. Use the regular prune whip recipe or this spiced one:

Spiced Apricot Whip

2 1/2 cups cooked dried apricots
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
1/4 teaspoon ginger
18 marshmallows
1 1/2 cups whipping cream

Mash hot apricots to a pulp, add sugar and mix thoroughly. Cool, cut marshmallows into small pieces and add to apricots. Fold this fruit mixture into whipped cream a little at a time. Chill. Makes 12 servings.
