Teacher Training Plan At Deaf School Backed

A plan to allow the State School for the Deaf to train its own teachers because of a nationwide shortage of qualified instructors, was endorsed Tuesday by the State Board of Control.

To cost about $23,000 yearly, the training program will be introduced at the 1959 Legislature.

Superintendent Marvin H. Clatterbuck was authorized to work out details of the plan to subsidize college students, particularly during their fifth year when they would be paid while in training at the Deaf School here.

Salem needs from three to five teachers each year and the state from eight to ten, he said.

The board also named a committee to assist architects in planning a proposed women's penitentiary east of Salem. The board will ask the Legislature for funds. Named to the committee were Warden Clarence Gladden of the State Penitentiary; Paul J. Squier, superintendent of the Oregon Correctional Institution; Circuit Judge Ralph Holman of Clackamas County; Courtney Johns, Linn County district attorney; Mrs. Clara Argo, president of the Oregon Prison Society; Rep. Grace Peck, Portland; Arthur Handley, assistant secretary of the State Board of Control.

Bids were called for construction of a $483,000 72-girl dormitory at Hillcrest School for girls. They will be opened May 22.

The board also ordered a survey of electrical and steam distribution systems for the capitol group. The survey will determine if the present systems are adequate to serve future buildings in the area.

Control Board Raps Farm Assignments for Doctors

Doctors who are superintendents of state institutions should be relieved of agricultural problems so that they can devote their entire time to caring for patients. This is the opinion of the state Board of Control members who agreed Tuesday to work toward correlating all agricultural activities of the state under one head.

Effecting considerable economy in management of state farms was an added incentive for reorganization, Robert J. Steward, director of agriculture and head of the land use sub committee who has studied needed changes in the state institutional farm program, said.

Wasteful cited
Steward pointed out as an example that state trucks went empty to the state's Eastern Oregon farm to bring back grain to the valley. Apples went to waste on Willamette Valley state farms and eastern Oregon Mental Hospital bought apples on the open market.

Because of lack of unification in the institutional farm program, such uneconomical practices were found by the committee, Steward said.

Serving on the sub committee, headed by Steward, are Ben Newell, Marion County extension agent, who is co-chairman with the director of agriculture; Cornelius Bateson, Sr., and Robert H. Clark, farmers; C. T. Gladden, Oregon State Penitentiary warden; Frank McKennon of the OSDA, Manning Becker, Harold Ewalt and Rex Warren of Oregon State College.

Bids for construction of a $483,000 dormitory for Hillcrest School will be called for Wednesday and opened May 22, the board decided.

April Rain Upped Valley Water Supply

Abnormally heavy April precipitation added to an already adequate water supply is the outlook for farmers in the Willamette Valley, according to a report released Tuesday by W. T. Frost, snow survey supervisor for the USDA. Late season flows of all smaller tributaries will be partly dependent upon satisfactory summer rains.

Water content of the mountain snow-pack is 165 per cent last year at this date and is equal to the normal peak accumulation of the winter season.

Water stored in five multiple-purpose reservoirs, Cottage Grove, Detroit, Dorena, Fern Ridge and Lookout Point, is 6 per cent less than last year.

Ample runoff is available to fill these reservoirs for normal summer operations, Frost said.

Flow of the Willamette at Salem is forecast at 115 per cent average.

Relatives Give Testimony in Will Contest

Relatives of the late Miss Albina Page of Salem testified Tuesday that Miss Page had indicated while alive that she desired her estate to go to the Page family.

Petitioners completed their case in the contest before Judge Val Sloper in which Wilmer C. Page, a nephew to Miss Page, objects to the will which leaves most of a $900,000 estate to a fund for needy college students.

Wilmer C. Page testified Tuesday that his late aunt Albina often indicated she wanted to leave the bulk of her estate to the family.

A defense witness Harold Slaver of Portland, officer in the U.S. National Bank of Portland, testified to Miss Page's business acumen and said she would have understood complicated legal instruments if properly explained to her.

The trial without a jury is slated to continue today.

Employment Rise Lags in County

"The expected seasonal upswing in Marion County employment this spring just didn't materialize," Kenneth Peterson, county welfare director, said Tuesday.

During the month of April, a total of 2,737 persons were on the welfare rolls as compared to 2,088 for the same month a year ago. Of the total, 804 were in the general assistance group last month as compared to 415 a year ago. "Usually welfare cases start rising rapidly during December and continue until a rapid drop comes in April," Peterson said. "This year there was no apparent drop at all," he added. There were 760 general assistance cases in March which rose to 804 during April rather than dropping as is usual at this time of the year.

Other welfare case loads remained fairly static in the old age assistance, aid to dependent children, the blind, and disabled persons categories, Peterson said.
