U.N. Watchdog Team to Take Up Positions Along Lebanon Border Today

By TOM MASTERSON
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.N. observer mission in revolt-battered Lebanon said Sunday it expects to place a watchdog team in the strategic Bekaa border area Monday.

Col. Maurice Brown, New Zealand senior officer with the mission, said some opposition leaders had advised against attempting to put teams on the borders too soon. But Brown denied published reports the observers had been prevented from going to the Bekaa area, near the Syrian border on the north.

He also denied reports the rebels had fired on U.N. forces in the Bekaa Valley Saturday. His men heard some shooting in the area, he said.

He said Sabri Hamadeh, the opposition chief in that region, had told observers they should not try to get to the borders too soon.

Anxious to Cooperate

Hussein Owaini, a leader here in the opposition national front reviving against pro-Western President Camille Chamoun, told a reporter the opposition is anxious to cooperate with the U.N. group.

He said the advice to observers to turn back from the Bekaa Valley Saturday had been a purely local decision to protect U.N. personnel.

Owaini said, "We now are in revolution but our movement lacks the discipline of a military organization. We cannot guarantee the safety of U.N. observers in remote frontier areas where people may not understand the object of the mission. We want to cooperate with the U.N. observers."

Brown's proposed action was disclosed as U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld arrived in Cairo to confer with President Nasser of the United Arab Republic and other officials.

'Massive Aid Given'

Lebanon's charges in the U. N. Security Council and that the U.A.R. was providing massive aid to Chamoun's opposition and to rebel bands resulted in the U.N. observer team being sent to Lebanon.

The Bekaa region has been described as one route for alleged Syrian aid to rebels in Tripoli where the rebellion flared in violence 45 days ago. Government troops were reported forced out of a Bekaa region post at Habla Saturday.

Tito Note Protests Nagy Death

BELGRADE (AP) — President Tito has personally helped draft a note to Hungary protesting the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy, reliable sources said Sunday night.

Tito left Belgrade several weeks ago for a rest on his secluded Adriatic island of Brioni. Friday he met there with Yugoslav Ambassador to Budapest Jovo Kopicic, who was called back for consultations.

Foreign Minister Koca Popovic was also present at the meeting that dealt with the executions in Budapest. Other top-ranking Yugoslav leaders also are at Brioni, and it is believed they too participated in the drafting of the note.

The note is expected to be delivered early this week. It reportedly will protest violation of a Yugoslav-Hungarian agreement of November 1956. That was the agreement under which asylum for Nagy and his group in the Yugoslav Embassy building in Budapest was terminated on the condition they would be free to go home without punishment for past activities. They were seized by Soviet troops, as soon as they left the building of the Yugoslav Embassy and taken to Romania.

The Belgrade newspaper Politika said, meanwhile, the execution of Nagy and his associates was a "premeditated move aimed at stirring up quarrels between our country and our neighbors."

Evidently speaking with the approval of the government, the newspaper added: "The execution of Nagy was related as a means of sharpening relations with our socialist — Communist — country and also even more as a horrible warning to all those who oppose the present revival of Stalinist policies."

More Executions Reported Of Hungary Rebel Leaders

NEW YORK (AP)—More Hungarian executions and secret trials of leaders in the abortive 1956 revolt were reported Sunday.

The report came from Dr. Bela Fabian, chairman of the Federation of Hungarian Former Political Prisoners, who said his organization had received word of the new developments in Hungary.

Dr. Fabian said Joseph Kovacs, Sándor Racs and Sándor Karsai, all top leaders in the revolt, have been executed after secret trials. They were chairman, president and deputy chairman, respectively, of the Revolutionary Workers Council which led the uprising.

Now in progress, Dr. Fabian said, are three more secret trials. In one, he said, are teachers and students of the Kossuth Military Academy. In another are several doctors who treated wounded Freedom Fighters and refused to
